More Than 100,000 Trees Are Ordered

Allegany County Club members have already passed the goal of 100,000 trees established for 1933 by the Allegany County Junior Extension Committee. To date 125 boys and girls have sent in their order blanks for the free seedlings, given to them by the State Conservation Department.

With the extension of time given them, until February 22nd, to file their orders there is hopes of even reaching the 1932 record of 159,000 trees. This record established in 1932 led all counties in New York State by over 30,000 trees. Reports to date indicate Allegany county still leading.

There are few projects of a more worthwhile nature. Considering that these trees will be planted on lands now idle and returning no income to the owner. Trees planted on such lands not only become salable in from ten to forty years, but increase the value of adjoining lands through the conserving of soil moisture, preventing soil erosion and damaging gullies.

The Farm Bureau Office at Belmont, N. Y., will be glad to supply complete information regarding the use of trees for such purposes.

All orders should be filed on or before Feb. 22nd.

Picture Judging Contest

Allegany county boys and girls who are interested in dairying are participating in a judging contest sponsored by the Allegany county 4-H Dairy Club. The contestants in this contest receive, at intervals of two weeks, a picture of four dairy animals. The score card is included which assists the contestant in judging the animals. After five classes of animals are judged the contestant returns to the county club agent at Belmont, the report form indicating his placings. These will then be graded according to announced placings the ten high contestants in the county will receive awards, given by the County 4-H Dairy Club, at the annual organization meeting of the club April 21, 1933.

Boys and girls who are interested in participating in this contest should address the County Club Agent, Belmont, N. Y. Complete information will then be forwarded to them regarding the contest.

Sewing, like kitchen work, is much easier and takes less time when there is a convenient center in which to do it.

Work for Needy

Instead of the $45,000 additional which he asked for continuing the employment of relief recipients in construction work in Letchworth Park, under way since early last winter, Charles R. Vanarsdale, superintendent, has been notified that the sum of $4,000 only will be forthcoming.

Jobless men of Allegany county will find employment at that park henceforth, eliminating those from Wyoming county, and they will work with the men taken from the relief lists of Livingston county, the Genesee State Park Commissioner announces.

It is reported that about 50 men from Allegany county will be employed in the park lands the balance of the winter. The emergency work bureau of the county of which J. N. Thompson of Angelica is chairman, will handle the applications for work.

West Notch Man Killed

Maurice R. Leyman, aged 33 years, was instantly killed when an oil tank on which he was standing exploded last Friday morning. It is believed Leyman was engaged in thawing out frozen pipes on the A. C. A. lease where he had been employed for five years. The explosion was heard for miles around. The force fractured the man's skull and jaw, crushed his chest and shattered his leg. He leaves his widow, a son and three daughters.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

THE END OF THE PADDLE

Long moons ago, a young Indian, his wife and little black-eyed papoose lived in the valley of the "long winding waters" or Susquehanna. A call of his people in council compelled him to journey far on the trail to the council of the Nanticoques who lived "where the valley widens" or Ah-wa-ga.

He bade his family farewell and started down the long winding trail on his errand; he walked rapidly since he thought it would hasten the return to his home. But when the sun set that evening he found himself tired, and sat on the bank of the stream, nearly exhausted by his too-rapid pace.

Then an eagle flew over his head and he longingly wished for the wings of an eagle; but that was an impossible wish.

The sun rose pink over the eastern hill at daybreak and the young courier started southward on his errand, still tired and still thinking of his young black-eyed papoose. Onward he pressed and, by chance, since the trail wound around the curve of the river, he noted a large floating log.

Thought he, "Why not leap upon the log?" So, sure-footed he rode the log on its way southward. After a while his legs became tired, and he tried to sit on the log, but he soon found it a difficult task. He took his stone hatchet from his belt and cut a seat in the log, but then his legs slipped off. Again he took his hatchet, and this time he cut two places for his feet and thus rode the log in safety. The longer he rode, the more he thought; finally he began to hollow the log until at length he created a dug-out canoe. He tried different kinds of sticks to guide the log and found a flattened end was the finest kind; so from it came the paddle, which allowed the canoe to go upstream as well as down.

Because he did it in longing for his little papoose, the Indians still cut the face of a babe on the end of their paddles, in memory of the inventor of the canoe and the paddle.
