GEORGE WASHINGTON

Personality is one of the main features brought out in Washington's character. Determination and individuality are shown thru his strength, while foresight and patience gave him the ability to work with his cohorts.

The personality of Washington was and is about the best known of his characteristics. Every one liked him and showed it by unanimously electing him the first President of the United States.

Because he was the first president and obtained all of these characteristics, it has left the impression that he rightly deserved the title of "The Father of Our Country."

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN

A subscription campaign was launched in Andover High School Monday, Feb. 20th, under the auspices of the Curtis Publishing Company. Mr. James Harrigan, a representative of this concern, initiated the drive for funds, the purpose of which is to reduce the debt of the Athletic Association of Andover High School.

If the campaign is successful, a party will be given in school for all those who sold subscriptions. Mr. Harrigan showed the pupils the many useful and novelty awards which are given for selling a certain number of magazines.

STAFF PARTY

The members of the Hi Herald staff welcomed the newly-elected staff by holding a party in the school library last Friday night, Feb. 17. Seventeen members, chaperoned by Mr. Perrone and Miss Clifford, attended the party.

CAMP FIRE PARTY

Members and former members of the Gatusi Camp Fire group held a dancing party at the I. O. O. F. Hall last Saturday night, Feb. 18th. The Camp Fire Girls, having decided to end up their activities in this line, threw the kind of a party that everyone enjoys, which included putting together jig-saw puzzles and dancing.

ANDOVER DEFEATS ALFRED IN FAST GAME ON ANDOVER'S COURT

On Thursday night, Feb. 16, Andover defeated Alfred High School in a league game. At the end of the game the score was confused, but the official score was announced as 32-31 in favor of Andover.

The Andover team scored first when Cannon sank a long shot but Alfred tied the game up when Pierce also made a long shot.

In the second quarter Alfred again scored the same number of points as it scored in the first quarter but Andover could only score on a long shot by Cannon.

It was a determined team that took the floor for Andover at the beginning of the second half and they put up one of the greatest fights ever put up by an Andover team.

During the game Alfred made 13 field goals and five foul shots to Andover's eleven field goals and ten foul shots, so it was Andover's ability to make the free throws that finally decided the game for them.

Table with 5 columns: Player, Points, Rebounds, Assists, Fouls. Includes totals for Alfred H. S. and Andover.

Referee: Chrimies. Timer: Lehman. Scorer: Alderson.

An important game will be played this week when Andover High School plays Whitesville High School on the court at Whitesville.

Whitesville is now leading the league with Andover in second place. If Andover wins this game Andover will be tied with them for top honors, and it will be necessary to play an extra game on a neutral court.

ALFRED GIRLS DEFEAT ANDOVER BY 31-29 SCORE

Two evening matched sextettes played an exciting game Thursday, Feb. 16th on Andover's court.

Both teams started off with a bang. Dean started the scoring for Andover when she made a field shot.

The Andover girls determined to make the game a good one, went in the second quarter and played very good basketball, sinking two baskets and one foul shot.

With the start of the second half it looked as though Andover was going to win. Their defense was especially good during this quarter.

The fourth quarter saw the most exciting moments of all the whole game, the score being even all thru the quarter.

Table with 5 columns: Player, Points, Rebounds, Assists, Fouls. Includes totals for Alfred Girls and Andover Girls.

Dean chalked up a total of 19 points for high score. W. Vincent of Alfred was high scorer for them with 12 points.

THE SPY

Bagdad—Well, boys and girls of the Andover High School, here I am again with a load of news.

The Spy has been busy over the week-end, attending the basketball game Thursday, the Hi Herald meeting Friday and Saturday he was a guest of the "Bon Fire" Girls.

At the "Bon Fire" party, Charley Lever amused the few people who did not leave the room when he started to play, "Oh, Charley, My Boy," on the old "sewing machine" piano.

"Hot Shot" Alderson, Andover's flash and (falling) star forward, brought two dozen pickles to the Hi Herald party and went home with a quart of milk, a bowl of salad, and half of a cake.

I wonder why "Ed" Alderson is so miserable at the same party? Maybe it was because the other "Red-Ed" wasn't there.

I heard that Cannon-ball was so angry because his name was in this column last week, he tore his copy of the Hi Herald into a jig-saw puzzle.

I sure DO hope that all A. H. S. basketball men stay in tonight, with that game over on the "ping pong" court coming tomorrow night.

Juicy, Lever and Padden are all snuffer over the game Friday night. Or—not the game—but after the game.

According to an eye witness Phil Lynch is Dorothy Oakes' latest conquest. As far as Dorothy is concerned they come and go.

Here is the revised list of the four Russmen—Cook, Geer, Spicer and Croyle, have been replaced by Vickers, "Red" Alderson, Baker and Cook. Cook is the only regular back and is sure of a position.

Old Blood and Thunder "Dreamer" sure is trying to get the students work in the present subscription contest. One "sub" has been turned in thus far.

I am rather enjoying my visit in Bagdad and thanks to my little helper I get out the dope on what's going on back in Andover.

As ever, THE SPY

ORGANIZE DANCING CLASSES Miss Annette Clifford has undertaken to give free dancing lessons to the pupils of Andover High School who wish to learn.

REVENGE The following story was written by a High School student and is a well-written and interesting story.

Don then took a much needed vacation. He was out of the service a month. When he returned it was late fall. The water was cold and the weather difficult for the coast guard, altho favorable for the run-runners.

Once more the "Spray" was idling in the darkness off the coast of Delaware, waiting for a large load of liquor. Don had two things in mind: he must get Lanier and yet he must avoid Betty and perhaps his best friend, McGintus.

He was standing alone on the bridge when he heard the hum of the boat. He felt alone without McGintus, yet he did not forget Lanier and his brother. If Lanier were on this boat he would blow it into bits. Then the sickening thought of Betty and McGintus came. He forgot it for now the boat was along side. He shouted as tho in a dream: "Lights—full speed ahead!"

Will Lieutenant Don Voorhees find Lanier or will he find McGintus? HUMOR Ray: "What would a land flowing with milk and honey be like?" Pauline: "Sticky."

Miss Clifford: "Fay, what are the Middle Ages?" Fay B.: "They used to be from 80 to 45; now they're from 50 to 70."

Lee: "See that truck? Look at him go." "You shouldn't refer to a truck as 'him,' say 'her.'" veils with her father and frequently pilots a small run-running boat for the thrill.

Lee: "Not this time. That was a mail truck."

By the time the men were at their posts the chug of the "Target," believed to be run by Lanier, was along side, about three hundred yards to port.

Don cupped his hands. Placing them to his lips he shouted his orders, "Lights, and full speed ahead." His voice was calm but there gleamed in his eyes a strange excitement mingled with one of hatred, for he knew Lanier was on that boat.

A powerful searchlight was switched on the "Spray." It shot ahead, cutting the water as keenly as the huge light at the stern cut the heavy darkness. Don shouted again, this time not so calmly, "Keep that light on 'em, Jones. Don't lose them an inch."

The "Target," a fast boat, was now doing full speed but the "Spray" was the fastest in the service and was assigned especially for this job.

Don walked close to the gunner in charge of the one pounder. "Give 'em three blanks. If they don't stop, put one into the wheelhouse," he commanded.

The gunner obeyed. The one pounder barked out three times. They did not stop and then suddenly the "Target" sprang into flames, casting a red glow over the sky. It was like a giant meteor skimming thru the water.

Soon the "Target" started to idle and the "Spray" came alongside. There was a man swimming near to their port. They quickly hailed him in and sent him below.

Soon Don went below to see the captain and to his surprise the rescued man was none other than Lanier.

Don stood looking down at the man, who by this time was dressed in clean clothes and enjoying himself.

He was a short, fat man of about 40. He had gray hair and a stubby gray mustache. He took everything in with his small cat-like eyes. He seemed entirely at home.

Don could not help admiring this man altho he hated him and wished to kill him the moment he saw him. He had set his own boat on fire and sunk probably a million dollars worth of property in order to escape capture and conviction which would send him to prison. He had never been known to do that before.

"I hope you realize, Lieutenant, that you have no evidence that will enable you to bring any charges against me," he said in a curt manner.

"I do," replied Don. On returning to their post, the "Spray" received a cable instructing them to keep a sharp lookout for a boat believed to be piloted by a girl.

Don knew who it would be. He had dreaded this ever since he had met Betty. He would have to pursue her and perhaps shoot and kill her. There came a lump in his throat as he read the cable. But he knew he must perform his duty if he met her boat.

McGintus came to his side, read the cable and understood. There were to be no orders to pursue or notice any run runners that night.

During the next month Don was in a crabby mood. One day he had words with his best friend, McGintus, and two weeks later McGintus resigned from the service. Their parting was brief, with a handshake, a few words and nod of the head. When McGintus was half way down the dock at Newport, Don called him back.

"What are you going to do, run rum?" "Why not? There's good money in it."

"All I can say is that I hope I will never meet you out there, for you have been by far the greatest friend I have ever had."
