Alfred University

(Special to Andover News)

Alfred, N. Y.—Glass furnaces operated at 1,400 centigrade; kilns fired to 3,100 fahrenheit; temperatures read with the optical pyrometer; clay processed thru all the ceramic operations; the potters' wheel operated—in fact all the modern processes of manufacture of glass and ceramic ware will be open to public inspection during the First Annual St. Patrick Celebration at Alfred University College of Ceramics on March 15 and 16.

Special invitation is extended by Dean M. E. Holmes and the ceramic faculty and senior students to prospective college students interested in the field of ceramics, and their parents, to visit the Ceramic College and explore the new plant just completed by the state at a cost of $175,000 and equipped at an additional cost of $40,000, making it the largest and best equipped ceramic college in the world. During the "open house" hours, 7 to 9 Wednesday evening, visitors may see all the laboratories in operation with students at their work. Students are making souvenir ceramic pieces stamped "N.Y.S.C.C." to be available for the 600 or 700 visitors expected at the open house. Plans are under way for neighboring high schools to attend in bodies to see the processes of manufacture as taught at Alfred.

The program opens on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with the arrival of St. Pat escorted by freshmen and a parade of floats from the Ceramic College to Alumni Hall where St. Pat will deliver his speech on what he thinks of the faculty and the students. All of the two-day program will be symbolic of the legendary place held by St. Pat, the patron of engineers, as the originator of the use of spades and shovels in mining, not forgetting, of course,

St. Pat's fare, corned beef and cabbage, will be served at luncheon in the Ceramic building at a very nominal sum, probably 15 cents a person, to all who wish. A "freshman show" will furnish entertainment during the meal.

From 2:45 to 5:45 will be dancing in the new building to "toe-twitching" tunes played by a good orchestra. Visitors may inspect the new building at any time, but during the "open house," 7 to 9, all laboratories will be in use with students at their regular tasks. From 9 to 11 Wednesday night St. Pat's motion picture, "Farewell to Arms" will offer a fitting climax to the day's entertainment. On Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Alumni Hall the Footlight Club will stage two plays, the Minuet, by Louis Parker and Madame Butterfly by Belasco.

The Marquis Carl Scott
The Marquise Dorothy Ravit

The "crowning" event of the celebration will come with the crowning of St. Pat's queen, elected from the upper class women by the students, at the student ball on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Davis gymnasium which will be tastefully decorated in keeping with Irish tradition of St. Patrick.

"We are especially anxious," said Dean Holmes, in discussing the program, "to have everyone who possibly can to attend the open house and the public programs on Wednesday and Thursday afternoon, and to see this new building which belongs to the people of the State of New York."

Word was received in Andover Thursday of the narrow escape of Will Phillips from a burning hotel in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He and several others were in the third floor of the building when fire broke out and escape was impossible. The party was forced to jump from a window. Mr. Phillips fortunately landed on a network of telephone lines and bounded from them to a deep snow bank. Others of his party were less fortunate and were instantly killed. The report says 20 persons died from the fire.

"If a man has a good farm, he should keep possession of it as long as possible, in the hope that some temporary rise in prices or possibly a monetary change will enable him to keep the property. If he gives up the savings are surely gone. He has little to lose from holding on as long as any slight chance remains."

ON MEETING AN OBJECTION

Every business man knows the value of being able to sense an objection and meet it before it is advanced. Jesus knew that far better. He went one night to dine with a prominent Pharisee. While the dinner was in progress a certain woman of unfortunate experience crept into the room and kneeling down by Jesus began to bathe his feet with precious ointment and wipe them with her hair. Jesus knew what that outburst of unselfishness meant to an over-burdened spirit, and accepted the tribute with gracious dignity. But all the time he was perfectly well aware of the thoughts that were passing thru the self-satisfied mind of his host.

"Ah," said that cynical gentleman to himself, "if he were a prophet he would have known that this woman is a sinner, and would have refused to let her touch him."

He might have been tempted to put his thought into words, but he never had a chance. Quick as a flash Jesus turned on him:

"Simon, I have somewhat to say to thee."

"Teacher, say on." It was a half concealed sneer.

"There was a man who had two debtors," said Jesus. "One owed him five hundred shillings and the other fifty. Neither could pay and he forgave them both. Which of them, do you think, will love him most?"

Simon sensed a trap, and moved cautiously.

"I imagine the one who owed him the most," said he.

"Right," said Jesus. "Simon, seest thou this woman?"

Simon nodded. He began to wish the conversation had not started.

"When I came into your house, you gave me no water for my feet," Jesus continued with that extraordinary frankness which cut straight to the heart of things. "But she has washed my feet with her tears and dried them with her hair. You gave me no kiss, but she has not ceased to kiss my feet. You poured none of your expensive oil on my head, but she has taken her precious ointment, which she could ill-afford, and anointed me."

The dining-room was silent; every eye was turned upon the Teacher; the poor woman still knelt at his feet, embarrassed that her action should have caused so much comment.

"She is like the debtor who owed the five hundred shillings," he said. "Her sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she loved much. To whom little is forgiven, the same loves little." And then with a glance of infinite tenderness:

"Thy sins are forgiven," he said to her simply.

It is easy to imagine that the conversation rather dragged during the remainder of the meal. Even very supercilious and self-assured gentlemen hesitated to expose themselves to the thrusts of a mind which could anticipate criticisms before they were uttered, and deal with them so crisply.
