TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY Dr. E. A. Bates, Cornell (Copyright 1933)

THE TAIL OF THE BEAR In moons long ago, Grandfather Bear had a long black tail which he proudly waved in all directions as he sauntered along. One wintry day, while on the trail beside the frozen lake, he met his crafty neighbor, Mr. Fox, who had a long string of fish. In answer to the bear's request for a fish, the fox told the bear to go catch some himself. The bear answered and said he did not know how. So the fox invited the bear out on the lake and told him that if he stuck his long bushy tail into the hole in the ice, the fish would try to seize it. Then, with a quick jerk of the tail, the fish could be thrown out onto the ice. Old Grandfather bear was a dreamer, and when he stuck his tail into the ice, he began to wonder about the fast moving clouds in the sky. So he quite forgot that he was fishing, and sat with his tail in the lake and dreamed and dreamed as the clouds moved across the heavens. Soon the old bear grew cold and thought he had better go back to his warm cave under the rocks; but when he tried to pull up his tail, he found it frozen fast in the ice. So he pulled and pulled. Finally it broke off short as you see it today. The Indians say that is why Grandfather Bear and even his great-grandchildren today will not walk on ice, because they remember how the bears lost their long waving tails many moons ago.

Cat Comes Back A cat story comes out of Silver Springs. A large pet cat was brought to that village from Stafford last summer by Mrs. Arthur Call, who left it at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hotchkiss. The cat proved a nuisance, injuring a neighbor's pet rabbit so that it died and otherwise causing annoyance, so finally, last July, it was turned over to a farmer on the Castile road. A day or so later, the cat came up missing, and never was heard from until a few days ago, when a card was received from Ruth Call, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss, with the astounding news that the feline had found its way back to its original home in Stafford, a distance of more than 40 miles.—Northern Allegany Observer.
