JHOULD LO LCH GOOD HEALTH By AMELIA H. GRANT, M.A., R.N. Director, Bureau of Nursing New York City Department of Health

THE DANGEROUS AGE

THE most important period in the life of every girl and young woman, as far as health is concerned, is between the ages of fifteen and thirty, with particular emphasis on the first seven of these years.

What you will be after reaching maturity depends on how you live during these seven years. Your entire future, in fact, may be determined by your habits during this period. Therefore to know how to safeguard your health during this critical period is especially important.

Authorities on tuberculosis are agreed that one third system also levy a heavy toll on lives not properly lived in girlhood and young womanhood.

"To thine own self be true," is the rule that every girl must apply if she desires good health.
