

Modern Methods - - Conservative Principles

We agree with the New Blood

Modern methods in business have proved their worth in hundreds of cases—tempered by the conservative principles as ancient as business itself . . . With the successful and progressive young business men of the day we fully agree in spirit and in practice—which probably explains one reason why our list of younger depositors looks like a directory of successful junior executives . . . Let us serve you with the most modern, yet conservative practice.

Lessening His Wants

Mother: "Baby has a new tooth!"
Father: "Well, that's one less thing for him to cry for."

Fixing Fences

The open season for that annual recreation period is at hand and the first requirement is a good Post Maul. Come in and get the hang of our latest offering, also note the low prices.

Ten pound, 80c; 12 pound 90c and 14 pound $1.00. Complete with hickory handles.

Four Hours

Why are all the paint makers making a great spurge over an enamel that dries in that particular length of time? Here's the story briefly:

Five years ago the lacquer craze hit the country; a preparation that would dry so fast that the ordinary home painter was unable to get anything but a mess of streaks and daubs for their efforts and the dealers who had tried the game faced a loss and lots of trouble from dissatisfied customers.

Four years ago Benj. Moore Co. came out with UTILAC, a product that would dry in four hours, flow as smoothly and spread as easily as any oil paint and giving a finish that would stand out equal to and give more service than the highest priced enamels. Ever since the paint makers have been trying to catch up with Utilac but Moore's have improved and perfected it so fast that all of them are still four years behind.

Utilac is better than ever this season and the price is again reduced—quarts $1.15, pints 60 cents and the small trimming can is 20 cents. Don't make a mistake or take chances—use Utilac and be sure you have something that is not equalled by any imitator.

Motor Oil

Something all cars, trucks, tractors and stationary gas engines must have to function and give service. Tixol is the answer to your problem of economy in Motor Oil, a full-bodied product with a family reputation to sustain, being an own brother to Tydol and Weedol.

Available now in heavy grade at no advance in price, $1.00 for two gallons, tax paid.
