Seniors Practice Duties of Faculty

Five Seniors from Alfred University are observing and practicing teachers' duties in Andover High School this week.

Miss Nordenstedt is assisting Miss Trenkle in the French, Latin and economic geography departments.

Miss Rutherford is observing Miss Clifford's duties.

Claire Greene is helping Mr. Perrone with his work.

Miss Cecelia O'Connell is observing Mrs. Joyce's work.

FIRST TRACK MEET OF THE SEASON THIS WEEK

Andover High School opens its track season Saturday, April 29th, with a track meet between Andover, Canisteo and Wellsville on the new high school track at Wellsville.

Not much is known about the opposing teams but they are supposed to be plenty strong. The Andover team has not shaped into expectations yet but it is hoped they will.

James Cannon and Malcolm Brundage are not getting up as high in the high jump and pole vault as they did last year, but it is too early to form any opinions as to their ability. In the other field events there has been almost no practice so not much can be said about the performers in these events.

In the running events Don Lynch looks good in the mile and half-mile with Joe McAndrew and Wilfred Gee also looking good in the half-mile. In the 440 "Dec" Clarke is expected to go as good as he did last year, but in the 100 and 220 yard dashes Andover is not sure of its men but Malcolm Brundage and Robert Spicer will probably come along as the season progresses.

How I Spent My Easter Vacation
Florence Mulholland—English III.

What a vacation! Of all the lovely, sunshiny days gone by and yet to come, my mother picked the week of my vacation to clean house. Thus, because of my mother's decision Monday morning found me with a pile of warm soapy water and an old rag, washing and scrubbing woodwork. Tuesday the monotony of scrubbing was changed to the still more tedious task of polishing furniture. How I did polish! It was not because of any ambition to improve the looks of the furniture that I exerted so much energy, but because I had to have some outlet for my temper, and the furniture seemed the safest thing around to give a piece of my mind to.

At last I was released from the job of house-cleaning only to be commanded to burn up the corn-stalks in our garden, which by the way should have been burned up last fall by my less ambitious brother. Wednesday morning I tramped to the garden, put on an old pair of gloves, grabbed a rake and began to work, secretly glad to get out of the house for there in the garden I could tell the world of how my family missed me without the fear of being reprimanded. At about noon I finished raking the cornstalks and carried them to the creek where I made a fire. There being many tall, very dry weeds around the spot and because of my neglecting to watch the fire, I almost succeeded in burning up the whole back yard. If it had not been for my quick thought, my intelligence and many other good qualities which I know of to the rest of the world, I really possess, I would have set fire to the whole bank of the creek. However, God does grant small favors, and I was spared from this dreadful calamity.

The rest of the week I was allowed to spend my time as I pleased, that is, after I had finished washing the dishes, making the beds and picking up.

Friday, due to the fact that my brother had to go out of town on business and after much persuading, I finally succeeded in going with him. I arrived home in the evening rather tired and rather frightened with two pairs of new shoes and a haircut. I justified myself by saying that I had worked hard all week and deserved it. My family coldly eyed me and asked if I didn't know there was a depression yet. I answered in the affirmative but that even so, one couldn't go around looking like a beggar.

The rest of the week went slowly by and I woke up bright and early Monday morning happy that my vacation was over.

BOE ZECKLY'S COLUMN

Once again our students, who are ill with the strange disease called love, may receive advice from a person who specializes in just such cases. We will have on our staff for the next few weeks Boe Zeckly, who will answer as many letters as possible in this paper. The ones that are not answered in this paper will be answered by mail.

This week we have letters from two of our young high school lads. These are the only ones we have room to print and the rest will be answered by mail.

Andover, New York
April 26, 1933.

Dear Boe:—
Ah, me! I am in a terrible pickle. I need some older person's advice just dreadfully. How I wish I could ask my mamma—but I just can't, Boe, so I'll confide in you.

It's like this, Boe: I've been going with a girl for almost one whole year and now I feel that I've wasted my time. It seems that she isn't true to me and I'm about broken hearted. I found a note that she wrote to another boy whose middle name is Henry and is my face red!

All the boys call me a sucker, too. Gee, Boe, it seems that the bottom has dropped right out of my world—gulp—the clouds are grey and I'm just about ready for the pot! Tell me, do pond turtles eat human flesh?

Good-bye, Boe.

Broken-hearted C. F. C.

Dear C. F. C.:—

Yes, my dear boy, turtles do eat human flesh, but they won't touch another of their own race. Please do not do anything as rash as jumping in the pond. I know you have ceased to care but please remember the boys want to swim in that creek this summer.

Don't let this little affair with your girl friend bother you. There are thousands of girls in the world who are looking for a big handsome man like you so just let Henry get hooked and you find yourself a new firsided to set by.

Lovingly yours,

BOE ZECKLY.

Andover, New York
April 24, 1933.

Dear Boe:—

I'm just a little boy who doesn't know what it's all about. I try hard to learn, but it seems that I just can't understand women.

It happened this way, Boe: My hair is red, yes, it's a very fiery red. One day I thought I had found the girl of my dreams—she came to school one day and her hair was red, too. Not red like mine, but kinda red. I think it's the kind they call henna red. Well I fell hard, Boe, and I thought I had the world on a string. But something happened, Boe, something came between us and cut the string; slowly but surely her hair lost its red but until now it is auburn. I feel that something has come between us—I can't understand this phenomena of hair changing color in such a short time. We are gradually drifting apart. What shall I do? I feel that if her hair was red once more we would be together as of yore. We would once more have something in common. What shall I do?

Bewildered Eddie.

Your case is very, very ridiculous. Imagine a boy with a mop of hair like yours being in love. With hair like that you should be a first class playboy. When will you boys ever learn not to tie yourselves down to one girl? Variety is the spice of life, my boy. I'll admit that girls with red hair are more attractive to boys but when it comes to a veneer, well that's a different matter. Of course you could dye your hair brown but that would be liable to cause trouble because her hair might change to red again all of a sudden. Just forget her, Eddie—red headed girls are hardly ever true to one fellow anyhow.

BOE ZECKLY.

PEOPLE OF THE EIGHTH GRADE vs. LESTER REGAN

Victor Yannie awoke one morning to find that his flower bed had been ruined by a wheel passing over the valuable bulbs. He strongly suspected Lester Regan whose bicycle tires were similar to the tracks left in his garden. Victor summoned Ida Mae Howland, the sheriff, and had Lester arrested.

Lester was taken before Justice of the Peace Llewellyn Howland for a hearing. The case was next taken before the grand jury who indicted Lester.

At the trial Judge Richard Burdick presided. The state was represented by District Attorney Beatrice Kruger. The defendant's lawyer was Clifford Burdick.

The jury, after listening carefully to the evidence, brought in the verdict not guilty. The case was dismissed and court adjourned.

SPY IS FOUND

Located at Willard Asylum—Could Not Stand Noise at Andover High School—Needed a Rest in Quiet Place.

The Spy, who has been missing for the past three weeks, has been found. Recognized by a student of Andover High School, he was forced to admit his identity. In an interview with the Spy last night, he said:

"The strain of working around Andover High School, with its mob of screaming girls, and boys who delighted in smashing up the furniture, began to tell on my nerves. I knew that in a short time my nerves would crack and that I would be subjected to a severe illness. The only thing that I could do to relieve myself was to find some quiet spot and take a good rest. Comparing Willard Asylum with the place I was quitting, satisfied me that I was going to be in a very quiet place."

"I regret that I had to leave you students of Andover High School, who love me so dearly, and I am sorry if I have caused you sorrow but I am feeling fine again and next week I'll have a lot to tell you."

We are all glad to have the Spy back and we know he will have a lot of news next week, so watch this paper next week for the latest school gossip.

Abe's boy Ilsey was in the outer office when the stenographer called out: "A wire from the salesman, Mr. Bronstein."

"Well," said the other, "when my husband gets cross I know how to get even with him. I always put starch in his handkerchiefs."

GREENWOOD

(Mrs. Rova Thompson, Reporter)

Greenwood Principal is Granted Copyright

Walter Redmond, principal of the Greenwood Union School, has just been granted a copyright concession at Washington on his design for radio remote control. The copyright gives him priority on all designs which embody the principles he has applied. He plans to perfect the design for patent.

The heterodyne radio engineering principle is the basis for the design. The range of the mechanism is limited only so far as radio waves themselves are limited. Foreseen among its wide application is a method of setting off high explosives at great distance.

Mr. Redmond was formerly connected with the Westinghouse Electric Company at Bloomfield, N. J., devoted to the manufacture of radio tubes. He has been a radio engineer and continues his research altho he has been principal of the high school here for the past two years. Mr. Redmond is a member of the Astronomic, Geologic and Physical Division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

It's Up to YOU

This is no time for defeatism! No time is the right time for laying down on the job. In spite of difficulties, the making of profits is up to YOU. There are no Aladdin's lamps to rub, no magic genies to precipitate gold out of thin mists at your bidding. If profit is to be made in your business, it will be by the sweat of your brow, the use of your brain and the advertising columns of the Andover News that you accomplish it.

Before times can be normal again we will all have to be normal ourselves. Get back into normal and you will see others following your example. A wise man has said: "If you have nothing that will pay you to advertise—advertise your business for sale."
