swinging to the end of the boughs, and now fitted out with wings. The wind carried the maple seed far and wide and the maple still sighs to the wind and the squirrel in gratitude, for now her children grow in all directions, far from the mother tree.

Long moons passed and at length Red men learned the secret of pointing sticks and shooting them with bows at the deer, the bear, and the other animals. But often, the deer ran too fast for the arrow and the arrow fell to the ground long before it reached the heart of the deer.

An old hunter sat under a maple tree and wondered how he could make his arrows travel further and straighter toward their mark. As he sat under the tree, the soft wind started to blow the maple seed far from the maple. And the hunter thought: "My arrows need wings."

The robin, overhearing his words, dropped a feather from its wing. And the hunter split the feather thru its middle and fastened it on either side of the wooden shaft, to give the arrow its needed wings.

So it was the desire of the maple to have its children fly far from its side on winged seeds that gave the wise hunter the feathers for his arrow.

Highway bridge construction bids on three bridges in Allegany county have been submitted to Lou C. Allen, clerk of the board of supervisors.

R. E. Gratz, Olean, was low bidder for the 20-foot reinforced concrete bridge over Little Genesee Creek, town of Genesee. His figure was $3,889.84.

The low bidder on the 16-foot truss steel bridge over Dodge creek, town of Clarksville, with figures set at $3,392, and on the 20-foot reinforced concrete I-beam bridge over North Branch, Phillips creek, town of West Almond, cost estimated at $2,156.08, was Anthony Cervi & Co., Inc., Buffalo.

Combination Well

A water well, drilled by Ellery Washburn on his farm just a short distance east of Shinglehouse, Pa., recently turned out to be a good water well as well as a gas well. The drillers found a gas vein at a depth of 50 feet and water at 70 feet. He has piped the gas into his farm home and has plenty of it, as well as lots of pure water. Neither interferes with the other.

Hume Justice Removed

From Office

Removal from office of Peace Justice John Kopler, town of Hume, has been ordered by the appellate division of the Supreme Court. Kopler, the court held in an unanimous decision, had exceeded his authority in using his office to further his private business as a bill collector.
