Alfred University

(Special to Andover News)

Alfred, Nov. 6.—"Julius Caesar," that classic from the pen of William Shakespeare, is to be produced at Alfred University on Wednesday evening, Nov. 15th, at 8:15 by the Shakespeare Players of New York City.

The play everyone knows, but high school students in particular will be interested since they read it in high school English. They will be admitted for 25c. Adults at 40c.

The players are making their seventh annual tour of the United States, having appeared in over 800 high schools and colleges in 41 states. Critics have been particularly well pleased with their production of Julius Caesar; but they also present The Merchant of Venice, Macbeth and Hamlet. The company is highly recommended by college departments of literature and speech, by directors of little theatres, and by newspapers.

"It was a vivid production, true to the best traditions of Shakespeare"—Professor Koch, University of North Carolina. "You are performing an important educational function," Professor Weaver, University of Wisconsin. "Forceful and interesting," says Dean Heiges, State Teachers' College, Pennsylvania.

"One of the outstanding drama events of the season," Galveston News. "Last night's performance was unostentatious yet impressive," Cincinnati Inquirer.

Considering the importance of Shakespeare as a playwright, and the stress put upon his work in both high school and college study, this is an opportunity seldom offered to smaller communities. One is not considered educated unless he has read Shakespeare. But his education is vastly improved if he sees Shakespeare on the stage. This is an opportunity not only for Alfred University and Alfred High School pupils, but also for persons living in any community accessible to Alfred.

James Henderson and Clair Bruce strive to present the Shakespearean play in all of its beauty of speech, acting, scene, making it a highly entertaining program. The setting used is such as will enforce the simplicity and impressiveness of real Shakespearean drama.
