Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Briggs from Hornell, N. Y., were here last week visiting relatives and friends.

HOW, WHAT and WHY?

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Mice and Fruit Trees

J. R. J. writes: "The mice in our orchard damage the bark of the trees each winter. Will you please tell me how I can get rid of the mice, or at least how I can keep them from girdling the trees."

G. W. Peck of the pomology department answers: "Poison bait has been used in many orchards successfully. The cost of making and applying poison bait is comparatively small; and to reduce the population of mice seems a most desirable way of reducing injury."

"A very satisfactory poison bait may be made by this formula: Mix one-eighth ounce of powdered strychnine with an equal amount of baking soda, and sift this mixture over a quart of roll oats or wheat. Stir the mixture thoroughly. Heat this material and add six tablespoons of melted tallow and two of paraffin. Stir the mixture until each oat flake or kernel of wheat is waterproofed."

"Place a tablespoon of this material in some container such as a tin can, or wooden station made for the purpose, in the grass or weeds near the base of each tree, or along fence rows or rubbish piles. If possible, locate the runways and distribute some of the poisoned grain in them."

"Two methods of protection are: Mounding the trees with earth, and the installation of galvanized wire cloth of one-quarter inch mesh. Even wrapping the trunks with building paper, tar paper, or wood veneer will greatly reduce the injury."

Citron Preserves

Mrs. H. S. G. writes: "We raised a few citron in our home garden this year, and would like a recipe for preparing them as preserves. No cookbook that we have gives such a recipe."

The following recipe is included in the new Cornell bulletin, "Citron Preserves and Fruit Juices":

1 pound prepared citron
1 pound sugar
1/2 lemon, sliced thin
2 tablespoons preserved, sliced ginger (if desired).

Cut the citron into one-fourth inch cubes, cover them with salt water (1 tablespoon of salt to each quart of water), and let them stand overnight. Drain the citron and rinse it with cold water. Cover it with boiling water, cook it rapidly for 15 minutes, and again drain it. Boil the sugar and the water for five minutes, add the citron, the sliced lemon and the preserved ginger, and boil the mixture rapidly until the citron is transparent. Put the preserves in clean, hot jars and seal them. The ginger may be omitted.

A copy of this bulletin, E-267, is sent to you on request from the Office of Publication, New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Test Milk by Mail

D. L. S. writes: "What is the milk-testing-by-mail service of dairy record clubs? How much does it cost, and how does one obtain it?"

J. W. Avery of the central New York Farm Bureau dairy record club replies: "Your county agricultural agent will help you arrange for this service thru your county dairy record club, which works with the local farm bureau."

"Each month the dairymen send milk samples from each of his cows to the laboratory, where the milk is tested and the reports are mailed back to him. The club provides each dairymen with a sample-mailing box, a sampling dipper, and complete record forms."

"The report shows each cow's milk test, and her total production of both milk and butterfat to date. It also carries a record of grain eaten by each cow."

"The plan has proved entirely successful for herds of from one to one hundred cows. The cost is twelve cents a cow a month, with certain deductions for large herds."

"The central laboratory at the New York state college of agriculture now tests for members in 34 counties of the state, and all other counties are provided with a similar service."
