Cattle Judging

From Pictures

Thirty Allegany County 4-H Club members have submitted placings in the national freside cattle judging contest sponsored by Hoard's Dairyman. The girls and boys studied illustrations of four animals of the five major breeds. Prizes are offered also by the New York State College of Agriculture, and as well by the Allegany County 4-H Dairy Club.

In 1933 Allegany county's entries won the state contest, with Charles Witter of Cuba as high scorer. Winners will be known about March 15.

Must Have Frozen Out

Francis Mead brought to the News office last Monday a live baby grasshopper, picked up in their yard Sunday. The little fellow was lively and seemed ready to go out on his own, despite the zero weather of February just passed.

High Tide in Home Bureau

Membership in the Allegany county Home Bureau has reached the high mark of 612, the largest number enrolled since 1930. Present enrollment is 67 more than one year ago when it was but 545.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

SHOOTING STARS

As was the custom, all the old men and young braves of the village were sitting around the council fire listening to the tales of bravery which occurred many, many moons before. The young men sighed that all the deeds of strength and wisdom had been accomplished, when across the heavens came a spray of shooting stars. Pointing to them, the oldest chief said:

"Brave and true men have tried many times to find the earth home of a shooting star without success. A chieftainship waits for the young man who brings one back to our council. Wise young men make new trails by their own effort."

Among the many listeners that night was Star Gazer, who spent many long nights learning the secret of the star trails in the heavens and spurred by the words of the old chief, he resolved to track a shooting star to its hiding place and bring it back to the council.

Many moons he wandered thru the forest and one night at mid-moon, he came to rest under an old oak tree, on the end of one of whose bare limbs sat a large gray owl. As the owl sat there studying the sky, a great shower of stars descended and the old gray owl gave an awful shriek. At this signal, the frogs all leaped from their hiding places and as the stars reached the earth, the frogs opened their wide mouths and caught the stars.

One large star came close to where young Star Gazer was seated and he caught it in his hand just as an old frog was about to snatch it. Swiftly he ran back to the village with his prize and the next evening was awarded his chieftainship for the capture of the star.

So when you notice the large mouth of the frog, and the way his throat can expand in swallowing large objects, remember the Indian tells how he grew that way catching shooting stars in the old days.

The tail of a comet may be millions of miles in length.
