been eagerly waiting during this administration, and especially with the opening of Spring, seems very remote at this time. "Big Business," on which the nation depends, whether we like it or not, and which sets the wheels of industry going, and furnishes the payroll for the millions of unemployed, seems to shy at the vacillating methods of President Roosevelt and Congress. They demand sure foundations on which to depend before they invest millions in industry. What Mr. Roosevelt needs is some good advisors in his cabinet and a willingness to be advised. This has been proved by the great airmail blunder. Several bills in committees and before Congress today, favored by the administration, are reatcionary, autocratic and un-American and should be rejected by liberty-loving people. The improvement in business the past few months has been created by borrowed capital and cannot go on forever. No man or nation can borrow himself or itself rich or prosperous-there comes a pay-day. Business firms understand this, and uncertainty prevails. There must be established a settled policy before business firms resume and prosperity returns.

The NRA is not giving this to the country and the greatest industrialists have not subscribed to it and probably will not. Here is hoping the mirage may become a reality!
