CWA Name Change Expected

Whatever continuation there is of Civil Works Administration projects after March 31 will be carried on under some other name—as yet not known to the Allegany county CWA committee. It will be a Works Division or something. Information to this effect reached the Belmont office Monday, dated March 17. It said: "The Civil Works Administration will be suspended as of March 31 and its function will be continued thereafter as a Works Division." Orders were given to make a final accounting as of that date of all CWA projects, including tools and materials on hand.

Assistant Field Engineer Fred Schade, connected with the Elmira district CWA office, has been as- signed to Allegany county, working out of the Belmont office.

Safety inspectors have been named as follows, responsible for first aid work on projects under way: Angelica, Donovan E. Platt; Cuba, Leo Monroe and Lawrence Miller; Belmont High School, Howard Rice; New Hudson, Wayland Barber; Can- eadea, Keith Dunnington; Bolivar, Charles Mead; Elmora, Fay Crocker; Genesee, Harvey Barlow; Amity, Franklin West; Wellsville, Vincent Lynch and LaRue Pelton; Wells- ville High School, George Lampman; Andover, Llewellyn Clair; Friend- ship, Edward Grisch; Scio, Sey- mour Karr; Almond, B. B. Palmer; Belmont, Fred Hood; Belfast, Glenn Hill; Houghton, Wirt Saunders; West Clarksville, Harrison Cheney.

Who's Who at the County Home

Farmer or farm laborer, of whom there are 30, lead in all occupations among the 79 occupants at the Alle- gany County Home at Angelica, ac- cording to a recent detailed inspec- tion by state welfare department officials.

Many other interesting facts about the unfortunate men and women whose later years have been clouded with financial difficulties until they have been compelled to seek assist- ance from the county that they might have food and clothing and shelter, have been brought out in the report, some of which are given herewith.

In occupations laborers, next to farmers or farm laborers, lead with 12. Ten have unknown occupations, eight are housewives, five railroad men, four oil workers, two each cooks, barbers and carpenters, one each sheet metal worker, seamstress, bricklayer, glass blower, factory worker.

In civil status 36 are single, 22 widowed or widowered, 15 married, four divorced, one each separated and not known. But 24 have no living relatives, 55 having them.

But nine have insurance, 70 with- out; five have property, 74 none; 43 have burial plots, 36 none; in religion: Protestants, 53; Catholic five; no preference 21.

As to place of birth, 67 were born in the United States, 53 in New York State, eight in Pennsylvania, two each in Virginia and Ohio, one each in New Jersey, Illinois and Massachusetts. Of the five foreign born, two came from Ireland, one each from England, Sweden and Canada. Six do not know the place of birth.

The average length of time in the county home of all its inmates is but four years.

The moralist might tell you, read- er, from these skeleton figures just how to avoid dependence upon the county in old age, but we spare try- ing.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates, Cornell Keeper of the Faith

Down the long water trail of the blue lake, the father and his son had paddled. They left their canoe safe from the wind between two tree trunks, and started along the wood- land trail to the great common council of the people.

They journeyed one day and slept overnight under the sheltering pines close to a spring, then the morning sun threw shadows ahead of them as they progressed to the central council beneath the ancient hill of the Onondagas.

At high noon the mighty chiefs arose and, throwing their heads up- ward, offered a prayer of thanksgiv- ing for the safety of the journey and a prayer of hope for tolerance in council.

With chin up, and with a blood- red feather in his hair, came a chief escorted by the courier. The young son whispered to his father, "Who is that?"

His father replied, "That is the mighty war chief, boasting of his victories in the southern land." This warrior was thanked by the head chief for his service and retired from the council ring.

Then the orator arose and brought up many matters concerning traffic and councils with other tribes. The boy asked his father, "Why does he not boast like the warrior?"

The father replied, "He wears the white feather; he seeks to avoid bloodshed; he is greater than the warrior, and has a permanent seat in the council ring."

All afternoon, the spokesmen for the different tribes expressed their opinions. Finally, the sunset hour came, and ere the council concluded its deliberations, an old man in plain buckskin and with a blue feather in his hair arose. As he threw his arms and voice towards the heavens, the boy again questioned his father, "Who is this plain man?"

The father replied, "He is the keeper of faith and greater than the warrior and the orator, for he builds faith in men."

NEW USE FOR SACKCLOTH

Flour sacks, salt sacks, and sugar sacks are now used as material for baby's rompers, the small child's dresses and her big sister's suits, says the New York State college of home economics.

Remove printed lettering by soak- ing the bags in kerosene, says the college. Then roll them tightly to- gether, and lay aside for 24 hours. Then put the sacks in cold water, and rub until the designs are re- moved. Finally, wash the sacks in heavy suds.

Success of this method depends partly on what kind of ink was used on the sack. Sometimes, the last traces of ink are removed by boiling the material for half an hour after it has been scrubbed with soap and hot water.

The larger the sack, the better it is for dress-making. Ninety-eight pound flour sacks are most common- ly used. Two of them, either dyed or trimmed with colored ric-rac braid or bias binding tape, may be made into a child's dress in one of many attractive styles. Sacks containing the kind of salt farmers buy for live-
