night so I spoke to the boys whom I knew I could trust and said that we would stay that night and watch from a hill to see what was going to happen.

We had a couple of horses hitched near us so another fellow and I said we would follow him and leave the rest to watch.

We let them get quite a long distance and saw they were heading for Dry Pass which was a place where they could not be followed, for it was all rock.

We were within shooting distance so we let go. There were seven of them. As soon as we had fired they bunched together and were going to fight it out with us.

The men that were stationed on the hill reported having seen a rider come in shortly before us, put his horse away and go to bed.

The two rustlers whom we had captured led the outfit to the place where they were keeping the cattle for shipment so we drove them back.

A little while later I was riding with the rest of the boys and as we were going thru a pass a bullet whistled past my ear.

Looking around I did not see Saunders so asked the men where he had gone. They said he had slipped away.

Sending the wounded man home with two of the men, I set out with the rest to catch that sniper and when we arrived at the place where he had shot from, I picked up his trail and my horse being the fastest of them all, I set out in pursuit.

When I was within a hundred yards of him he saw that he could not get away so he got off his horse and took to shelter.

As soon as I was within shooting distance he opened up. I was looking for this and made my horse see-saw all over the place.

I went back home and after telling Barbara about it I asked her if she would go riding with me.

Alfred University

(Special to Andover News)

Alfred, N. Y., April 16.—Prof. Ray W. Wingate, director of music at Alfred University, will include several selections from Stephen Foster's compositions in his regular organ service at the village church on Friday, April 20 at 7.30.

Many of Foster's compositions—"Swanee River," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming,"—have become a part of the life of almost every American; so much so that Foster Hall, Indianapolis, Ind., has made a special memorial collection of the songs and compositions by Foster which could be found, preparing one thousand such sets as gifts to American libraries.

This "Foster Hall Reproductions of the Songs and Compositions and Arrangements of Stephen Collins Foster," containing about 200 selections, has been presented to Alfred University library. To make the collection complete, "Stephen Foster, America's Troubadour," the biography of Foster by John Howard Tasker, has been added also.

This biography is said by many to be the first important biographical work of 1934. Howard, thru his work as author, lecturer, musician, composer, is the logical person to write such a biography.

Plans are well under way, according to Dr. M. E. Holmes, dean of the New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University, for an exhibit at the State Fair at Syracuse, Sept. 2-9, of glass blowing and pottery throwing.

These demonstrations will be in continual progress showing the actual work done by students at Alfred University in pottery, and the work of the professional glass blower making fine glassware. The department of glass technology at Alfred does not attempt to train workers for the applied mechanics of glass blowing since, according to Dean Holmes, "It requires years of training in technique but not a knowledge of the chemistry and physics of glass which are taught to the students here."

All of the materials necessary for the demonstrations, the prepared clay and glass, will be put into shape at Alfred University under the direction of the faculty there and taken to Syracuse.

The Utica Jubilee Singers are scheduled to appear at Alfred in a return engagement of negro songs on April 25, at 8 p. m. These singers have proved very popular as radio entertainers and in their trip abroad. They offered a highly pleasing program at their previous appearance at Alfred.

The Family DOCTOR

THE "NERVOUS" WOMAN

Hasn't she made the way turbulent for the family doctor? I mean just that—the nervous woman! "Just nervous." What a diagnosis! And what a multitude of devils hide under the blanket of "nervousness." Why, a nervous woman is almost as intractable a customer as a nervous man!

The pelvic organs are the source of much of woman's nervous ailments. These will bear only certain modified discussion in a place like this—but I am going to mention one of my recent cases:

She was aged 29. Had one little daughter, seven years old. Did just housekeeping for her husband and the little family. There was no indication of serious, organic disease. She was a perfectly normal girl, yet subject to more than ordinary family duties.

Nevertheless, she said her family was a "miserable" to her. She was morose, discouraged, cried at the slightest provocation—admitted that she was a confirmed invalid. Feared tuberculosis!

Just one thing the matter: She had gotten out of bed too early, when that child was born—up at eleven days—she had been so "amazed" after the happy, terrible event. Neighbors applauded—till the nervousness came. . . . Subinvolution of the uterus. After bringing the child to its term and surrendering it to the world—the uterus had not gone back to its normal size. It was large, heavy, dragging. That was the entire cause of the woman's nervousness that was fast disabling her. Fortunately she
