New Ideas

If worth considering at all will be for the reason that they aim to correct some real and vexing condition.

In the good old days the home builders of this section found suitable covering materials for their structures in the native grown pine and later from the basswood trees of our own forests; clear siding and outside trim wrought from these timbers were free of gum or sap and offered great resistance to decay; also offered a perfect surface for the application of paint. If a good paint was applied with reasonable care and intelligence it would wear for many years without the slightest symptom of cracks, blisters or peeling.

Some 20 years or more ago we found our good siding timber gone so were forced to accept other woods from other climes and just in the last few years we are finding out that it is impossible to paint and get satisfactory results with even the best of our time-tried painting materials.

Paint makers have recognized this condition for a long time and their research departments have been spending much thought and money devising a product that would fully supply the need.

That product is now a fact, and is being made by the Benj. Moore Co. It will make perfect a new job; it will correct the old one! you may apply it on wood, steel, brick or cement with the utmost confidence.

It is Moore's First Coater—no matter whether your job is new or old or what paint you may eventually use, you cannot afford to take chances by using any other preparation for primer or first coat.

New Cars for Old

We can't all have new cars this season, but we can make the old bus shine so the neighbors will think we have.

Simoniz is the answer. A whole year's supply for less than $1.00, and besides you will get a better allowance when you do change.

Simonized cars have more trade-in value.
