FARMS SELL AT HIGHER PRICES

Average Advance of Almost Two and One-Half Dollars an Acre is Noted. Prices on farm lands advanced during the first three months of the year compared to the same months in 1933, according to a statement issued by the Federal farm credit administration and received at the New York State college of agriculture. The average sale price of farms sold by the Federal land banks thru-out the United States increased from $17.02 an acre to $19.40. During the same period the cash payment at the time of sale increased somewhat. According to the statement, the Springfield, Mass., bank reports farm land selling more readily than a year ago; farms valued at $3,000 to $5,000 being the most popular. The amount of cash paid down, the statement says, is slightly more than a year ago, taking the United States as a whole, but in some areas it is very much greater. In the south and far west, it is nearly twice as large.

FRUIT, FLOWERS and GARDEN

TREATING INJURED WOODY PLANTS Donald Wyma

Healthy, vigorous growth can be brought back to many plants which suffered severe winter injury if they receive proper care during the dry summer months. One of the first summer tasks to suffer injury in the winter is the xylem, or water-conducting tissue. If the plant can not draw enough water thru these tissues during the hot months, it will die. Sometimes plants which apparently have come thru the winter in fair condition, die suddenly in summer or even in the fall, and this dying may be especially noticeable this year unless such plants are given the needed care. First, prune injured plants moderately. A heavy pruning would injure the plant by cutting off the manufacture of food in the leaves. Injured plants should receive plenty of water during the summer, and spraying the leaves after sunset is good practice. Spraying in the hot sun would tend to injure the leaves. With removal of all dead or weakened branches and careful watering thru the summer, many winter injured plants can be nursed back to thrifty growth.
