No. 8—CITY TRAFFIC

TATHEN we look down from a tall building and watch the traffic in the streets VV below, we wonder how in the world all those cars can keep moving , crossing intersections, passing each other, turning in and out c parking positions . . . without getting hopelessly

As a matter of fact, from away up there, we do see traffic jams now and then, and many times the reasons for the trouble are just as plain as day. Someone will try to turn from a wrong position, and and in a few seconds the whole line of cars is thrown out of kilter for blocks. Or a pedestrian will dart out in front of a car so the driver has to slam on his do the same thing. Then there is apt to be a great blowing of horns that only adds to the confusion. But when we become part of that traffic our whole viewpoint changes. We can't see those things going on up ahead that make us stop and start and stop again. And the worst of it is we can't look into other people's minds . . . the driver who makes a sudden turn, or the pedestrian who decides to do something we can't foresee. The interesting thing is that what pedestrians do may seem strange and illogical to us while we're driving; but we're all leading double lives . . . sometimes drivers.

how our psychology changes when we change from one to the other. Anyhow, things can happen all-of-asudden in our crowded cities and we have to be ready for them. And so, as one driver has said, we have to drive along with every der suspicion. We all like to think it was the other fellow's fault when we get into trouble. But, as we have been reminded, if we're sufficiently alert we don't let the other fellow's mistake get us into trouble.

Expert drivers tell us there is just one thing to do . . . to give ourselves a margin of safety . . . a reserve of space and a reserve of time. It's an easy matter to take a reserve of space. They point out that we don't have to drive right up almost bumper-to-bumper with the car ahead. we do, the chances are we can't stop as quickly as we may need to . . . if he suddenly stops, slows up, or makes a turn. But if we drop back a little, and take a little extra room, we won't have to worry about "stopping on a dime" or turning out at right angles to avoid bumping. And we won't pick up such a fine collection of nicked fenders and bent bumpers, either. But a reasonable interval of space, or even clear sailing, for that matter, won't do us much good if we don't keep a time margin of safety too. In other words, we don't want to go so fast that we won't have the same place at the same time. And we don' want to have to stop so fast that cars behind us pile into each other for perhaps a block back. need to protect ourselves from

We may all know these things, but we know them so well we're apt to get careless about them. Because we can drive almost automatically, and hardly have to sween think about it, we're apt to go rolling along thinking of somethic.

else. Then, all at once our eyes have an important message for our brain, and when they try to get the message through, the line is busy! So it doesn't pay to let our thoughts go wool-gathering. As a matter of fact, it makes eits driving just one emergency after another, which takes all a pleasure was at L And there is pleasure in city driving when we know we're doing a skillful job, keeping the proper margine of time and space.
