Jan Garber Coming to Ceres Coliseum, May 10

America's most famous orchestra, Jan Garber and his orchestra of 14 outstanding artists and entertainers, have been engaged to appear at the Coliseum ballroom in Ceres, N. Y., Sunday, May 10th, being the only engagement Jan will play enroute to Catalina Island in California, where his band appears for the summer season. Jan will bring with his orchestra the incomparable and na- tionally famous entertainers includ- ing Lee Bennett, Fritz Heilbron, Lew Palmer and Rudy Rudisill.

Jan Garber needs no introduction to dance and music lovers. His or- chestra is noted for a distinctive style of music and entertainment.

The Coliseum is very fortunate in being able to offer their patrons the only engagement in the east this season, of this famous band and assures ones and all an evening of dancing and entertainment that will ever be difficult to surpass. Dancing will be from 8 to 2.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

PRUNING ROSES

R. C. Allen

Now is the time to prune roses, particularly the hybrid tea, hybrid perpetual and polyantha types. The climbers should have been pruned soon after they flowered last sum- mer, but if not, it is well now to take out all the old canes and leave only the strong healthy ones that devel- oped last year.

If the climbers were laid down on the ground and mulched for the winter, they should now be tied up to the trellis. In doing this be careful not to have the canes twisted and not to let them overlap one another. If they were killed back during the winter, remove the dead parts.

The hybrid teas may be pruned rather severely. Take out all the weak or dead wood and cut the olive canes back to a height of about four inches above the soil. The pruning should be done with a pair of good sharp pruning shears, and the cut made at a slight slant just above a good live bud which points outward, since it helps to make a more at- tractive open-growing bush later.

The hybrid perpetuals should not be pruned as severely. Usually with this type, all the dead or weak wood is removed and the live canes pruned back to about eight inches above the soil. The polyanthas should be pruned in exactly the same manner as the hybrid teas.

NOTHING is more important for many people to know than that heart disease does not kill people suddenly as a rule—these instances merely stand out as spectacular ex- amples—most cases respond favor- ably to moderate living, and justify an optimistic outlook on life. Rest, exercise, occupation, diet—all need attention and skilled regulation.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

By Don Edwards

Fifteen minutes later. Nineteen reported that the Angel was on his under carriage. Dick was stirred out of his usual calm. He said excitedly, "That was a swell exchange that the 'Angel' made. He had a chute and a fifty-pound wheel to take with him."

Five minutes later he reported that the "Angel" had bailed out and landed half a mile west of the main highway.

Scarcely had the report ended when there was another call. He grinned to himself as he recognized the girls' voices. He gave them their O. K. and told them to go ahead. "Call the crash wagon. We'll be in in about a minute and we are on fire," Lois' voice announced sweetly.

Swanee yelled into the microphone "Bail out you fools before it's too late!"

"We can't; we haven't any para- chutes," came Lois' reply as calm as a summer's day.

"Crack it up easy. Slap it down on a wing," gasped Swanee.

"I'll make a three-point landing," Lois drawled unafraid. "I'm almost to the field now."

Swanee saw them coming in. They were slipping sideways; flame was streaming from the motor. As he watched, one of them crawled out on the wing to hold it against the drag. The blonde hair flying in the wind identified her as Mary. Lois was in the cockpit, directly in the way of the flames, when the plane straightened out.

The flying furnace hit the field, bounced, dipped one wing and rolled over. Swanee lunged to his feet and started walking—walking on legs that had been paralyzed for over a year.

He reeled and staggered but kept steadily on. Lois, getting to her feet from where she had been thrown unhurt, saw him and thought she must be crazy, but the next instant she was in his arms.

Mary was helped to her feet by the crash men, but well shaken up, and to cap it all Nineteen was cir- cling the field waiting for a landing. That night there was a celebration in Swanee's apartment. The "An- gel's" girl friend had joined them. Dick, his calmness regained, pro- posed a toast. "Six W," he said. "One for each of us. You can take your pick. Good wings, good wine, good women, good weather, good will and a good strong wind to help us along."

The "Angel's" laugh rang out, "And the end of a perfect day's work." (The End)

An Honest Transaction

The deal—this happened in Eng- land—was just being brought to a close.

"He appears to be the kind of horse I want," said the purchaser. "Yes, he's a fine-looking horse," the vendor answered.

"And he's a good worker?" "When you see 'im at work, you'll be delighted with 'im."

The horse changed owners. A week later a heated argument was being waged between the same two men.

"And you had the — cheek to tell me he was a good worker! Why, he couldn't pull a hen off its nest."

"I never told you nothing of the sort. Wot I said was—when you see 'im at work you'll be delighted with 'im—so you will!"

Horse Sense

A farmer once asked the editor of a country paper for advice, as fol- lows: "I have a horse that at times appears normal, but at other times is lame to an alarming degree. What shall I do?"

The reply came: "The next time your horse appears normal, sell him."

Strong Action

In a discussion on the type of milk which should be provided for school children, the chairman of the health committee said: "What this town needs is a supply of clean, fresh milk, and the council should take the bull by the horns and demand it."

Two Birds With One Stone

Any official who can perform dou- ble duty is a useful citizen, indeed. The chief of police of Dinksville was also Dinksville's veterinary sur- geon. An agitated woman called up his home.

"Do you want my husband in his capacity of veterinary or chief of po- lice?" asked the chief's wife.

"Both!" came the reply. "We can't get the bulldog to open his mouth; there's a burglar in it."

Aply Named

Johnston: "And what have you de- cided to call the new baby?" Wilkins: "Edison."

WANTED—Middle-aged lady to do light housework.—Mrs. Clayton Burger.

AFTER the first year of a child's life a common mistake is catering too much to his appetite. Variety is unnecessary and undesirable. — Adults need variety, young children do not. Until the age of three or four, young children are better off if they do not eat at the family table; it is easier to satisfy them with plain, simple, well-cooked foods. Re- fusal to eat should be met by ter- mination of the meal.
