Patriotism

Memorial Day at this spring time of the year sends thoughts back to those buddies in the war who failed to return home. Nathan Hale leaves us this saying that has remained as years advance: "I only regret that I have one life to lose for my coun-

Now, until the other day, patriotism was everywhere held to be the primary attribute of all right-thinking men. "Breathes there the man with soul so dead" went to the tune of "My Country, right or wrong." What has caused the change?

Patriotism gives to innumerable obscure persons a substantial moral possession, imparting dignity and worth to lives otherwise unbearably

Patriotism is high-minded and generous, like charity, it seeks not for itself. The splendors of country love are uncovered in the sight of all men and spread upon the roll of history. In all ages its influence has moulded men whose heroic greatness has become an example to every schoolboy.

Go back thru the pages of history and find what great deeds and great heroes of patriotism have done for us. It gives us magnificent reassurances of the worth and dignity of man and the richness of life. The time to destroy patriotism has not arrived, and that time will not arrive until we are certain to have something to put in its place.
