"Land Without Shade"

by Hans Helfritz

"Exploring Today"

by Lincoln Ellsworth

Lincoln Ellsworth's name has become familiar to everyone thru his exploring expeditions, but especially last winter during the time when it was thought he had been lost in the snow and ice of the South Pole. This book may be easily and quickly read and touches briefly on so many parts of the world, including sea, land and air that it cannot fail to offer some point of interest to all readers.

"Inter. Delusions"

by G. M. Stratton

Too much attention cannot be paid to books of this kind, written obviously to interest the every day reader and which make clear the part played by prejudice and inertia in forming public opinion. This book is heartily recommended to everyone who is interested in overcoming the influences which lead to prejudice and antagonism, whether personal, national or international.

An Atlas of Current Affairs

by J. G. Harrah

This atlas is of a special kind compiled for the purpose of clarifying our ideas concerning the new nations and their governments created at the end of the World War, thru a series of 74 maps, each accompanied by a brief explanation. This book is worth reading straight thru and invaluable for reference.
