The Tippler Pigeon The lippler Figeon
The tippler pigeon is by far the most intelligent of the fancy varieties. They have competed in races of from 100 to 150 miles, and homed in exceptionally good time. They are similar to homing pigeons, in the respect that they can be sold to fanciers living in distant cities and towns, and after a few months as prisoners in the lofts of their new owners, they are given their neir new owners, they are known there each in the hope that they will like helr new home and decide to settle and fly there. Many of them do like their new home and decide to settle and fly there. Many of them do like their new surroundings well enough to settle there, but some never can reconcile themselves to a new loft, and return as soon as they are liberated to their former dwellings.—Rural New-Yorker.

Gathering Happiness
Happiness is like manna. It is to be gathered in the grains and enjoyed every day; it will not keep; it cannot be accumulated; nor need we go out of, ourselves, nor into remote places to gather it, since it has rained down from heavan at our very goors, or eather within them. rather within them.

Owls and Hawks Ravenous

Owls and Hawks Ravenous Owls and hawks tear their prey apart, then swallow it in large chunks, bones, fur, feathers and all. When the ment has been dige-sted they get rid of the bones and other unwanted parts by coughing them up as pellets. These pellets are always rolled up with the bones and sharp bits wrapped up in the skin with the fur inside. It is possible to learn much about the birds' feeding habits through an examination of these pellets. The large Snowy or Arctic owl usuall; chooses one particular straw stack for his winter domicile and numerous pellets will be found atop this. One of these, strangely enough, yielded the skull of a least weasel, a tiny furry animal not known to be in that region at all.—Detroit News.

The Fattest Men

The fattest man ever known was probably Daniel Lambert, who died in 1800 in England at the age of forty.
His name was used by Nineteanh century writers as a symbol of great size.
His weight was 730 pounds and his waist line was 8 feet 6 inches. Pedro Cardoso, who was exhibited as the world's fattest man of recent years, died in Argentina. He weighed 638 pounds and measured 7 feet 5 inches around the waist.
