A DISH FOR THE WEEK

Hungry school children and cool autumn days call for a hearty soup like the following:
Cream of Vegetable Soup
2 medium-sized carrots
2 medium-sized potatoes
1 medium-sized white onion
2 tablespoons of butter
1 cup small green peas or diced beans
1 cup of medium white sauce
1 pint of stock, preferably either veal or chicken
Salt
White pepper.
Cut the carrots and potatoes into matchlike strips. Slice the onion and fry it in the butter until it becomes a light yellow. Cook the carrots and potatoes in boiling water until they are tender. Cook the peas uncovered in a small amount of water. Add them to the other vegetables. Add the hot sauce and the stock, and salt and pepper to taste. Serve in hot soup plates; and if desired, garnish the soup in each plate with a teaspoon of whipped cream sprinkled with finely minced parsley.

Carson's Movement for International Peace reads "the following books which form the new installment for the International Mind Alleviate."

"Finland," by Agnes Rothery. This is far more than a record of travel, with descriptions and illustrations of mountains, lakes and forests are not neglected. It takes us into the midst of a progressive people who are solving in their own way the problems of nationalism, debts, democracy and many others.

"Mexican Interlude," by J. H. Jackson. A delightful description of towns and places and the people of Mexico as they were revealed to two gay travelers who have interpreted their experiences with a spontaneous friendliness which must have made them the best of visitors. The book is fresh and readable and will surely attract attention to the Alleviate.

"Aerial Odyssey," by E. Alexander Powell. No reader will quarrel with this book for being just what it frankly purports to be—glimpses of fascinating countries around the Caribbean, many of which are seldom visited by the ordinary traveler.

"Liberty vs. Equality," by W. F. Russell. When we begin to discuss the question of the rights of man, it is well to have a clear idea as to just what we mean by liberty and
