They really have plenty of milk. In their precision drills atop the theatre building they pause at the famous Radio City Music all ballet, but they thought it could be fun imbibing of their ally health drink this way. The use of milk as the source of a clear, glamorous complexion has been thoroughly learned by the Radio City dancing corps. gasoline stove.

Across from the cupboard, near the door, is a radio built into a cabinet which is in the wall. Over the wheels, a little past the center are two clothes closets, one on each side. When these doors are swung open, they just touch each other and thus close off the two parts of the house.

The rear quarter is made into two seats, one on each side, making space for two people on each side. A finished off board may be put across between these two seats and serves as the table, thus making every ounce of space useful. Then this same board may be laid flat into grooves on the seats. By using the back of the seats to put over the board, the seats become a very comfortable bed in almost no time.

Some of these houses have their own power plants and can have electricity anywhere they go. Some camping grounds have electricity which can be plugged in for fifty cents to a dollar a night. There are three dome lights, eight side lights, three plug-ins and a light in each closet of the houses on wheels.

And here is another contribution:

Son's Choice
"Ma, what makes the ladies always like Sweet peas and big red roses? They're always picking them from the bush And putting them to their noses. If I were a girl (which I'm glad I'm not), I'd pick flowers as high as towers, And, too, some that didn't "stink" pretty; I guess they'd have to be sun-flowers." —Josephine Baker

Working Girls From "Four Corners of State" Help Launch Labor's Party

These four charming girl workers—From St. Lawrence, Rensselaer, New York and Erie counties—helped dedicate the emblem of the American Labor Party which appears on the state ballot in this election.

WORKING GIRLS from "the four corners" of New York State gathered at the campaign headquarters of the newly formed American Labor Party in the Hotel Claridge, New York City, recently to help dedicate the party's emblem in behalf of President Roosevelt and Governor Lehman, who head its column on the ballot.

"The idea that heaven will protect the working girl is out with us," said Miss Ann Holmes, of St. Lawrence County, spokesman for the group. "We know that the only protection that we have against sweat-shop conditions and coolie wages is a government program to help us in our fight against these abuses. The organization of a permanent American Labor Party means that we will have a voice in setting up the kind of national, state and city governments that will give us a fair and square deal."

TO sports writers, sports participants and sports fans 1936 was the banner year to date. Let me go on record now as saying 1937 will be greater in almost every way—especially in football. First, the so-called smaller colleges are coming into their own—no longer are they the scrub teams for the big boys. Second, better high school coaching has promoted better collegiate play and training. Third, more dads, mothers, sisters and kid brothers are interested in the great Fall pastime. Fourth, no longer is the All-America team chosen exclusively from the Big Three, the Big Ten or the Big Anything. Now the smaller colleges all have a chance.

This is going to be fun, analyzing every week what I think are the ten best games of the coming Saturday from the viewpoint of up-State New York fans and trying to predict their results in advance. What do you think of these selections for this Saturday, October 3?

COLGATE-URSINUS: Andy Kerr, as usual, is crying the blues but the canny Scot will still have a creditable record and lick Ursinus. Too early in the season for Ursinus to meet that competition. SYRACUSE-CLARKSON: Vic Hanson has had good records for the past two years losing only to Colgate. Clarkson is scrappy, especially against Bill Orange, but the odds are all against it.

HOBBART-UNION: Too bad Union and Hobart are meeting so early in the season. I'd say Hobart, but close.

CORNELL-YALE: I pick the Blue to win against an up-and-coming Cornell team.

RENSSELAER-ALFRED: Rensselaer loses to Alfred. Too many experienced Alfred men for the Tech boys.

NOTRE DAME-CARNEGIE TECH: Notre Dame Ramblers will take over Carnegie Tech but there will be a battle.

PENNSYLVANIA-LAFAYETTE: Pennsylvania should find it easy taking on Lafayette so early in the season. U. of P. in a walk.
