Grouchy Patient: "Are you a trained nurse?"
Nurse: "Yes, of course I'm a trained nurse."
Grouch: "Well, then, let's see you do some tricks."

She: "Sakes alive, I don't believe no woman could ever be so fat."
He: "What y' readin' now?"
She: "Why, this paper tells about an English woman who lost two thousand pounds."

"How come, brudder," asked the preacher, "dat when I talks about watermelon stealing yo' all snaps yo' fingers?"
"Nothin' 'tall, pahson, nothin' 'tall—I jist happened to 'member where I left mah knife."

"Doesn't that mule ever kick yo', uncle?"
"No, sah, he ain't yet, but he fre- quently kicks de place where Ah recently was."

Sam and Rastus were seated in a Jim Crow car on a southern railway, enroute to a plantation for the cot- ton picking season. They were dis- cussing politics. Rastus was a rabid partisan of the incumbent represen- tative.

"Well," said Sam, "Ah like him all right, Ah guess; but his platform ain't so good."
"Platform," snorted Rastus, "plat- fo'm! Say, don't you know 'at a political platform is jes' like a plat- fo'm on one o' dese yer rail' on' (this hit ain't meant to starve 'em, it's jes' meant to git in on 'em.)" thru the pages recently covered by the teacher. Suddenly he snaps his finger. "I've got it!"—one can al- most hear him exclaim.

Now, in another part of the room another fair friend is working on a history assignment. While she reads her nose wrinkles and she scowls blackly at an innocent "Freshie" across the aisle. Evidently, she has just reached a "treaty" or some- thing, for which she must learn re- sults, causes, etc. Now she fiercely grabs a sheet of paper and begins to write.
