briefs, which are "arguments boiled down," in which a debator organizes material into three divisions, introduction, brief proper, and conclusion. These briefs are to help a person arrange facts in such order that the debator can easily find what he needs to prove his statements. The study of briefs is going to help the English III Class defeat the English IV class in a debate in the not-so-far-distant future. That will be some compensation for the work involved.

HUMOR

Lost, Strayed or Stolen
Did you ever hear of anyone losing their pencil? Of course you have, and so has Mary Greenan. Mary just couldn't find her pencil Monday in shorthand class until some class members told her it was resting in her hair. Another person who does this frequently is the dignified "sophie" Sybil Winchell. Oh, well, you do have a lot of studying to do and I realize that it is hard to keep track of everything.

I was walking thru the hall last week and someone asked me to accompany them to the music room. I readily agreed. When nearing the room, to my surprise I felt something prick me. I looked around and evidently a common pin belonging to the person I was walking with had reached its destination. It didn't stay long after my "ouch" of terror was emitted.

After leaving the music room and coming back to go to my room, I decided to get a drink of H₂O, but before I had drunk much, "oah," another pin had roamed in the wrong direction. This was too much action for one day.

And to think that all the discomfort would be blamed to bad habits!

Miss Day: "Clyde, may we hear your paragraph?"
Clyde: "I haven't it done yet."
Miss Day: "I'm sorry but I'll have to see you at four o'clock."
Bud Dolan: "What are you sorry about?"

Miss Day: "Louis, have you your paragraph ready?"
L. Dodge: "I haven't it finished yet. I'm still on the topic sentence." (Who was it said "There's nothing like a good beginning?")

Gerald Wahl, speaking on the topic "The Old Order Changeth for the New."
"And now they use electricity instead of ropes to hang people with."

The tid-bits of information, gathered in a recent test, concerning Edison were most astounding. For instance:

"Edison's chief characteristics throat life were dress warm, by putting more undergarment on instead of overgarments; eat as much as YOU want to."

And another—
"Edison's chief characteristics were broad-shouldered, thick-set and deaf." (Just what IS a characteristic?)

Many things happen by accident, but here's an ear that happened that way according to —(we're afraid the authority isn't eminent enough):

"Edison was deaf in one ear which was caused by an accident in his youth."

Here are some answers received on a science test (taken by Freshmen), which cause many to wonder just what this study of science is all about:

"The revolution of the earth gives us our breath."
"The rotation of the earth gives us our breath." (According to this, it must be the rapidly with which the earth is whirling 'round and 'round that causes the air which we

A DISH FOR THE WEEK

Chickens, and especially stewing chickens, are plentiful on the market and may cost less now than later, market reports say. The New York State College of Home Economics suggests using them in the following recipe:

Creamed Chicken with Onions
1 ½ cups of chicken stock
4 tablespoons of flour
3 tablespoons of butter
2 chickens
4 bunches of small or 3 good-sized onions.

½ cup of cream or top milk
3 egg yolks
Salt
Pepper
Lemon juice

Remove the breasts and second joints from the chickens. Cook these in a small amount of water with the onions. As soon as tender, from one and one-half to two hours, depending on the age of the chicken, remove the chicken to a small serving dish. Boil the stock until it is reduced to the amount called for in the recipe. Drain the onions from the stock, melt the butter, add the flour gradually, and then add the stock to the butter and flour mixture, stirring it constantly.

As soon as the boiling point is reached, add the cream or top milk, the slightly beaten egg yolks, salt, pepper and lemon juice to taste. Add the onions and pour the mixture over the chicken. Unused parts of the chicken are good in a chicken pie, or in any other recipe for left-over chicken.

Suggested dinner menu: Creamed chicken with onions, sweet potatoes, rolls, apple or apricot Brown Betty, milk at least for the children, and tea or coffee if desired for grown-up buttered peas, currant jelly, crisp ups.

breathe. You figure it out, if you can.)

"The sun and its rays are called the solar system."
"The sun and its helpers are called the solar system." (And who, one might ask, are the sun's helpers?)

In an essay on "A boy may be wiser by and bye—An old man's wit may wander 'ere he die," a girl explained a boy's and a man's reaction to life from the infant to the antiquarian stage. After Miss Day had read and praised it, Louis Fullerson asked: "Heck—how could she know how a boy feels—she never was one."
