Eighth Grade Work in Store

The eighth grade pupils displayed their contribution for the Book Week celebration in one of the store windows, kindly donated for that purpose by Mrs. James Cannon. The display was arranged with the slogan for this year's Book Week in mind, "Books to Grow On." The purpose of the exhibit was to show books for various age levels, start-ing with the five-year level. The display, arranged on separate steps, was under the supervision of Regina Ann Richardson and Ann Hardy. After Wednesday the display was transferred to the library.

STUDENTS SERVE SCHOOL

Imagine giving up holiday time to work for one's school. That's what Doris Honegger and Leo Nobles did. The Library Council girls have been working faithfully in their odd moments typing and pasting pocket-ets, date due slips, and shelling backs of books, but had not com-pleted the various tasks which would make over a hundred new books available for the grade children for Book Week.

Consequently Doris Honegger spent Armistice Day in the library with Miss Day, not an hour or two but all day, putting the "finishing touches" in and on some of the books.

Leo Nobles, on the other hand, donated of his artistic abilities to the cause of Book Week. He drew four pen-and-ink sketches depicting the growth of people thru books. The first three grades are represent-ed as learning thru listening. The next three begin to take quite an interest in doing their own reading. Grades six to nine begin to ex-ploring thru the medium of books, while grades ten to twelve are re-presented by the high school student with a big head, who looks into "deep" books with a serious and learned look. These sketches are on a table whereon are books suit-able for each grade mentioned to "grow on."

The table, with its covering of French blue and gold, has a blue background with a gold and yellow sign "Books to Grow On" which was printed by Marjorie Nevel.

FRENCH BOOKS DISPLAYED

An unusual exhibition in the school library this week consists of an interesting collection of French books, loaned for display by Miss Catharine Killgrew, the Latin and French teacher in A. H. S.

These include a copy of the origi-nal version of "Chanson of Rol-and," written in old French, the "Fables of La Fontaine," whose il-lustration of the famed grasshopper and the ant contrast greatly with those in the modern French reader for a beginning class; "Collette et ses Freres," which are gayly color-ed. The display includes French classics such as "The Three Mus-keteers," and "The Count of Monte Cristo," which will be read in French II, and III, during the coming year.

NEW BOOKS EXHIBITED

Among the new books in the Book Nook are "Flush, of Wimpole Street and Broadway," a biography of the Brownings; "Caddie Wood-lawn," by Brink, a Newberry prize winner; an old favorite by Seton; "Wild Animals I Have Known," "Boy Scout with Byrd," by Siple, the Boy Scout himself; "Jane Ad-dams of Hull House," another fine biography and a history of settle-ment work in Chicago; "The Winged Horse" by Auslander and Hill, a story of the poets and their poetry; for the radio-minded, "The Radio Amateur's Handbook;" and last but not least a new copy of the ever-

Service

The motorist had just bought a tankful of gasoline, and the station attendant was going through his little ritual.

"Check the oil, sir?"

"Naw, it's OK."

"Got enough water in your radiator?"

"Yep, filled up."

"Anything else, sir?"

"Yep. Would you please stick out your tongue so that I can seal this letter?"
