subjects as closely as possible.

An editorial is an article written in a newspaper or magazine to express the writer's opinion on a subject. "An editorial can do four things: teach, attack, defend, and praise," says Arthur Brisbane. He adds that teaching is the most important, attacking is the easiest, and defending and praising are often neglected. neglected.

Take into consideration that altho Take into consoration has active editorials are written by the editor or others of the staff, any member of the student body may contribute to the editor's column if he so desires and express his own ideas and views thru the medium of his school ----AHS

Guess Who

This certain boy seems to be rather of popular with the girls, and, as you might expect, is usually seen with them. He has curly bair, always is grinning broadly, and always bas a witty remark to make. He has been on the basketball squad for four years and has proved very satisfactory as a member of it.

You certainly must know who this interesting boy is. If you don't, you are not fully acquainted with

He was a tall lanky fellow. dark complexioned, about 23 years old, and rather quiet in this talk and manners. I picked him up out of Shippensburg, Pa., on my way to Hagerstown, Md.

"Well, fellow, I said, where are you going?"

This is the way I generally greet my hitch-hikers.

"On my way South to see my mother, she lives in Greensboro, N. C."

His accent was distinctly southern He went on with his story which certainly did turn out to be one of interest showing that anything can happen once a fellow trarts working his way around the country.

"Father and I started for Canada a little over a year ago. We thumbed a ride as far as Buffalo, but the Canadian border authorities would not let us in as we had very little money. We were expecting to get work at tobacco curing which we understood. We did not expect to be turned down and Dad was very much discouraged. He decided to return home. I thought I would look for work in the North. I met another fellow and we travelled together picking up a few odd jobs, but work was certainly not to be had so we separated and I thought the best thing to do was go home.

"I'started to thumb my way and got down to a small town in Pennsylvania. Here a man gave me alift and said he would take me as far as he went mentioning a town shout 125 miles away. On the way I spoke to him about work and he said he might be able to use a good young man in his office but said no more about it. When we reached his town he still had made to mention, so I reminded him that he had said he might be able to use a good young man in his office but said no more about it.
