Regents Will Centralize All Rural Schools

Extension of System Under Regional Urged by Owen Committee.

In substantiation of a plan made recently that would soon come when State rural schools would be centralized by law, a following article from New York Herald-Tribune schools which voluntary centralization movement get a better deal than wait until they are forced to realize. A word to the effect: Here is the story:

Extension of the school system to all State school except its is recommended in the regents' inquiry into and cost of public education of New York State. The public yesterday by Owen committee on the inquiry.

"Extension of the system is much the chief providing equal education for every child Young at a press conference. "Equal opportunity" provided under the schoolhouse system. In the district, he said, the regents would supervision of a temporary commission, appointed in 1915 that created the system.

After Mr. Young New York State's education, although capita in the United nearly the lowest in the state's wealth, Dr. director of the inquiry report. The survey began in 1935, showed he said, that the old system was inefficient. The general for schools with four of which there he said, $397 a pupil erage in central ce including transportation.

The report, which "A Home Rule Meeting School District was prepared under grant by the Board was endorsed at a last Saturday by the New York State District Superintendent York Farm Bureau New York State tion, the Associated cepts and several tions. Another deal with the education. Mr. Young said, in April or May.
