Growers Are Watching For Bean Beetle

Migrant From the South Attacks Field, Lima and String Beans, Says Dr. R. W. Leiby.

Growers of string beans, lima beans, and field beans are on the lookout for a lace-like network of holes in the leaves of the plants, indicating that the Mexican bean beetle and its spiny grubs are feeding.

This unwelcome migrant from the South has taken permanent residence in the area from Saratoga to

Mexican bean beetle, spiny grub or larva, eggs, and typical injury to a bean leaf made by the beetle and its grubs.

Niagara Falls and southward, and is adding to the woes of the gardener by its destructive feeding on all kinds of beans, says Dr. R. W. Leiby of the New York State college of agriculture.

The coppery colored, black spotted Mexican bean beetle is regarded as a black sheep of his family. It belongs to the lady bird group most of whose members are beneficial. The beetles lay their orange-colored eggs in clusters on the under surface of the leaves and these produce brown yellow spiny grubs which cause most of the feeding injury.

A non-poisonous insecticide known as rotenone is advised to check the feeding of the beetle and its grubs. It can be applied as a dust or as a spray, but for a wet spray, use one pound of the finely ground powder containing four per cent of rotenone, mix this in 20 gallons of water, and use it in place of the three-fourths of one per cent dusting powder. The best time for the treatment is when severe injury is threatened, usually just after the first crop of eggs hatch and a scattering amount of feeding is observed.

Success comes only when the dust or spray is placed on the lower surface of the leaves where the beetles and grubs do most of their feeding. A second treatment is sometimes necessary when the injury persists or when a new brood of beetles or grubs appear.

Expect 50,000 in Conservation Plan

Enrollments in the Agricultural Conservation Program in New York State are expected to exceed 50,444 this year. The rate of enrollment now is about 7,000 a week, according to Earl A. Flasburgh, state executive officer. Up to April 19, he says, 22,091 had signed work sheets.

"Greatest use of the program in conservation is in the use of superphosphate and lime. They accounted for fully two-thirds of the payments under the 1937 program. Compilations are now being made as to the use of each of these practices and will be announced soon."

Announcement of the closing date for New York farmers who wish to take part in the program this year will also be made soon, says Mr. Flasburgh.

Modern styles in baby care are producing sturdier youngsters than ever before.

LITTLE BITS OF HUMOR

Emergency

"Who's that close-mouthed fellow over there?"

"He ain't close-mouthed; he's just waitin' for the janitor to come back with the spittoon."

Asking Too Much

An old Scotchman was smoking in the waiting room of a railway station. A porter said to him, "Don't you see that notice on the wall 'No Smoking Allowed'?"

"Yes, I do," said the Scot, "but how can I keep all your rules? There's another on the wall 'Wear Spirella Corsets'."

No Argument

Irate Baseball Player: "I wasn't out!"

Sarcastic Umpire: "Well, just have a look at the newspaper tomorrow."

Unfortunate

"You can't read or write? How did that happen?"

"Well, you see, it was this-a-way. I never went to school nchow, only one day, and that was at 'nigh' an' we didn't have no light, an' the teacher didn't come."

Parental Advice

A woman of great beauty called one day on a friend, bringing with her an eleven-year-old daughter who gave promise of becoming as great a beauty as her mother. During the conversation between the adults the girl amused herself by trying on her mother's hat. Turning to her parent the child said: "I look just like you 'no' mother, don't I?"

"Sh!" cautioned the mother with uplifted brows. "Don't be so loud."

Toasts were in order. The toast master arose to introduce a prominent elderly speaker and said:

"Gentlemen, you have just been giving your attention to a turkey stuffed with sage. How can I give you attention to a turkey stuffed with sage?"

"Good morning," said a stranger to a woman who had answered the door bell. "Would you like to see some insect powder?"

"No," she snapped. "I have no use for that stuff."

"Good," replied the stranger. "I will take that room you are advertising."

AROUND OUR HOUSE

DO YOU PUNISH OR GUIDE?

Most parents may be classified as of two kinds, the "punishers" and the "guiders." The punishers look back at the child's misdeed and inflict a penalty; the guiders look ahead to the way the youngster should learn to act and think, and then help him learn.

To be a guider, a parent must control emotion, and imagine the child's point of view to understand a youngster's actions. The parent whose three-year-old begins to display temper should not scold or spank or put the child to bed "to teach him how to behave," but should find the reason for the temper by studying when it is displayed, how often, what is the cause, and what the little victim expects to gain.

The cause usually points out the treatment, says the New York State College of Home Economics. If the parent decides the child is over-tired from playing with other children, she will help the youngster leave them earlier and play quietly by himself. This learning will help all during his life, whenever "the world is too much for him."

While the child first learns, the guider may need to give him a great deal of help. At first, she may have to carry him away from other children; but she will do it quietly every time he becomes over-tired and say, "Find something to do quietly by yourself for a while." Eventually the youngster will learn when he needs to be himself and will leave his playmates voluntarily.

At the start, the guider will make sure that some interesting picture books or games and playthings are nearby so that this business of playing by one's self will be fun. Later, she will let him be independent.
