GRANGE NEWS

Edith M. Thorne, Lecturer

As this paper goes to press Andover Grange, 1098, is entertaining Pomona Grange.
 Next week, June 9, the program in the local Grange will be a patriotic one, the fourth chapter in the book, "Grange Morale." There will be discussions, demonstrations, tableaux, a court scene as the importance of the court house as one of America's four houses will be emphasized; special music and a good time.
 The Andover Juveniles are six years old today, June 2. They have won many honors during the six years as well as many valuable National, State and county prizes, five honor pennants, an honor Grange certificate, a beautiful silk American flag, also many cash prizes. They are now a model Grange. Many of their number have been graduated and assumed responsibilities in the Subordinate Grange. They all seem just as eager, just as much in earnest to promote all the juvenile activities as ever.
 Naturally, I, being their first matron, am just as proud of them as a fond mother of her children. Kathleen Howland, who was only a small girl when the Juveniles started, is now their very efficient master.
 Tomorrow in the Pomona Grange they are putting on an exercise to show that the Juvenile Grange helps develop the outer me, the inner me, the social me, the civic me. During the six years they have done much community work, putting on floats Labor Day; planting trees on the library lawn; putting on exhibits at the county fair; sending flowers to the sick and shut-ins; making scrap books for children in the hospital; sending money to Near East relief and many other worthwhile things.
 Every year they have worked out the projects and goals set by the National and State Granges, making many scrapbooks that have required much hard work.
 Jean and Eleanor Northrup teach won State and National recognition and Jane Burdick State for essay work.
 Certainly your child ought to belong to such a worthwhile organization.
