FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

FALLACIES ABOUT BIRDS

Some of the birds that save millions in crops each year are still misjudged by the farmer.

The Baltimore oriole has been accused of damaging grapes and garden peas. But studies show that the oriole's food habits are largely beneficial. Caterpillars are its favorite fare, but it also eats quantities of plant and bark lice, ants, wasps, grasshoppers, spiders and weevils.

Farmers who tear swallows' nests from barn caves are turning out their best friends. Swallows consume vast numbers of harmful flying insects and young birds in the nest often eat more insects than their parents.

Woodpeckers are often suspected of damaging trees by their drillings. Each hole drilled means that the bird has located the larva of a destructive wood-boring insect. Woodpeckers are among the most valuable forest conservationists and with their heavy bills they get insects that other birds cannot get.

Fruit raisers often look on robins as enemies because of the robin's appetite for cherries, yet robins consume insects harmful to fruit crops thruout the year, and only during June and July do they eat cultivated fruit to any extent. One good way to keep robins out of the orchard is to plant mulberry trees nearby. Mulberries ripen at the same time as cherries and the birds prefer them to other fruits.

AROUND OUR HOUSE

SUMMER DESSERTS

Summer desserts, to many people, mean berry pies, fruit shortcakes and ice creams; but they can also mean fruit combinations and ice-box dishes that take only a little time to prepare and that make a light but delicious finale to warm weather meals.

Fruits probably offer the greatest variety. Strained or cut in small pieces, they can be folded into beaten egg whites or whipped cream, chilled, and perhaps served with a light sauce and some crisp cookies. They can also be molded in gelatin and served with whipped cream. A sherbet glass of sweetened and well-chilled diced oranges, grapefruit, pineapple and bananas make a delicious finish for a heavy meal.

Fresh pineapple points and un-hulled strawberries are very effective when arranged about a mound of powdered sugar on individual plates. Bananas can be sliced and served in the shell with a sprinkle of lemon juice and powdered sugar, or baked with pieces of tender rhubarb and a little sugar and butter. Baked apples or canned peaches take on a dressed-up look when coated with meringue, browned in the oven and served with a soft custard sauce.

Ice-box dishes require but a few minutes and can be kept in hand for busy, or lazy days. Cookie dough can be mixed up and stored in the refrigerator to be baked as needed. Puddings can be made by lining custard cups with lady fingers and filling them with a flavored custard. Little cakes can be made by arranging chocolate wafers or ginger snaps on top of each other with a spread of sweetened whipped cream between; coat the outside with whipped cream, chill for two or three hours, then slice diagonally.

Plain cup cakes take only a short time to make and can be varied with different sauces, fruit, chocolate, butterscotch, lemon, or with cooked or uncooked frostings.
