A-H-Guess Who

I notice that there are lots of changes on the bulletin boards around school. Irene Lynch brought us a colored map, showing the plans for the proposed canal in Germany to make Germany self-sufficient. I see there are some good articles for History B and C students in the library, and in room A.

Some time, I should like to drop in to watch the homemaking D class. I hear such interesting tales, of how they are learning to hammer, saw, mix colors, paint, sew and be original.

A large colored architect's sketch of Andover's new central school is now being shown on the display standard in the library.

The building is patterned in typical Colonial style. The main entrance has a portice and four pillars and on both sides of this entrance there are two smaller, but attractive entrances. A large spacious lawn in front of the school adds to the color of the school is the color of the school is the ladership of Montrose Greene, has overpowered their opponents in the lateraural touch fortunate the leadership of Montrose Greene, has overpowered their opponents in the lateraural touch fortunate the leadership of Montrose Greene, has overpowered their opponents in the lateraural touch fortunate the leadership of Montrose Greene, has overpowered their opponents in the lateraural touch fortunate the lateraural touch fortunat there are two smaller, but attractive entrances. general science class.

I notice that the World Series holds a certain fascination for some of our high school boys.

Have you been in Miss Dickinson's room lately, folks? You will see a toad and a tiny turtle. These animals have interesting pasts. Perhaps these pasts could be found in the column entitled "Faculty Fact."

I notice that the World Series holds a rember of the sight sand sand, while a member of the eighth grade, was voted as the prettiest girl. She is a member of the girls' chorus and the orchestra in which she is very active. You can recognize this girl by her happy smile. Can you guess who this girl is?

Guide Post

Friday, Oct. 7.—Soccer game at Andover, 4 p. m.

The assignment in Guidance class was to write rules for good manners. The following rules were selected as a sample of some of the humorous ones that were offered:

1—Don't use profamity in the presence of ladies.

2—Don't let dogs into the school house.

3—Don't hit anyone in the face while he is wearing glasses.

4—Don't hit little kids.

5—Don't fight on school grounds.

6—Do not tell the teacher lies.

7—Cleah your teeth twice a day.

8—Don't rob banks.

9—Don't sing at the table.
