CLOTHES - PERSONALITY

There are many things that can be learned in school besides the daily routine of studying. These things may be as important as your studies. One main subject in your mind is grooming and how to wear your clothes.

Every time you dress you create a picture which is pleasing or unpleasing. A person is often judged by his appearance and dress. Cleanliness, hair-dress, makeup, care of hands, and posture all go to make up good grooming but no matter how much care and emphasis you put on these points of grooming, they will not affect your appearance if you do not use a little care in your clothing. Choose your clothes putting emphasis on your good points and trying to cover up your bad features. If you have extra wide hips for instance, a dress with broad shoulders and not too form fitting will help to make your hips look smaller. Also a dress with lines up and down and not horizontal will add slimmness to your figure.

One should also choose accessories with much care. A tall slender person should try to pick out a hat which would make her look shorter, one with a rather wide brim and short crown; while a stout person should make herself look much taller by a high crowned hat.

Color is also an important factor to take into consideration. If you have red hair, certainly no one would want to see you coming towards him with a bright orange blouse unless he wore a pair of colored glasses. There are other combinations which are equally ridiculous. Then too, if you have a very yellow complexion you should not wear purple for it will make your skin look more yellow.

Try to wear appropriate clothes for the occasion. Who would like to see a girl come in the school room with high heels, ankle socks, and a silk dress? No matter how expensive her clothes are they are unattractive if worn in the wrong place and with wrong accessories.

Famous Sayings:

Charlotte Coryell: "Leave me alone, so I can get Around AHS written."

Jack Saunders: "Hey, Spicer, have you got your intermediate done?"

Mary Lynch: "Golly, you would never know."

Thelma Ahrens: "Listen, Marion, I have something to tell you."

Dorothy Sweet: "Hey, Beth, got your history B learnt?"

Donald Oakes: "It's a good thing that I have a sense of humor, Briggs."

Veronica Lynch: "Golly you did?"

Flora Flint: "We had a wonderful time."

Dolores Farwell: "Teach me how to do that step, Bethel."

George Joyce: "Am I getting good in typing? Oh, boy!"

Charles Dunham: "Henry, are you going home tonight?"

Donald Hardy: "Don't bring me down to that level, Miss Cappuccelli."

Louis Fulkerson: "You're not so smart, Saunders."

Mrs. McGee: "... All right, Nancy, that will do."

Mr. Holmes: "After all, girls, this isn't my game."

Purple and White Smothers Jasper

Locals Win 39-8

The Andover high Purple and White basketball team won their fifth game of the season Wednesday Dec. 21 on the Jasper court. The Andover team jumped in the lead in the early moments of the game and increased the lead at the rate of a point a minute.

The following team started the game: Saunders in center, Greene and Dugan, guards, and Joyce and Briggs forwards. Hardy, Dolan, Nobles, McAndrew and Oakes, as substitutes, anxiously awaited their turns.

In the second quarter a reserve team went in for Andover and the one-sided scoring continued. The Andover team outclassed the Jasper aggregation both in size and speed. At moments Jasper showed some fair passing ability, but the team as a whole lacked unity and experience.

Briggs was high scorer for Andover with eight points. Dolan and Greene scored seven and six respectively. Almost every player on the team scored at least four. No Andover player stood out on defense as the team lacked its usual spark and pep. George Joyce, the high-scoring sharpshooter of the team, took a vacation of this game, with only four points. The final score was 39-8.

The following are the scorers:

Book Review Written By Leo Nobles

Leo Nobles chose Coningsby Dawson's autobiography as his book report for English IV last week. The autobiography tells the cold facts about the World War, which are not as colorful and wonderful as pictured in fiction. The following is Leo's book review:

"Carry On" by Coningsby Dawson. No one realizes what soldiers go thru in a war. In the book "Carry On," you may gather a few of the things; but they are very different from the colorful descriptions you read about in fiction.

Coningsby Dawson was a novelist before the war. When the war broke out, he joined the Canadian forces and was sent to the front in the early part of the war. He was a lieutenant in the artillery. The letters which go to make up "Carry On" were written from the front, to his family in America.

When one visualizes a battlefield, he probably pictures in his mind one of Dante's descriptions of a battle. A real battlefield is surprisingly different. There's no flash of sword or splendour of uniforms. It is a vast sea of mud, full of unburied dead, pitted and pock-marked by shell holes, treeless and brushless. The men who toil across it look more like outcasts of London than soldiers. They are loaded down like pack animals; their shoulders are rounded; they are weary to death but they must go on. Even when their comrades are falling beside them, they have only time to quietly say to themselves, "He's gone West."

One also pictures men who show fierce hate toward the foe, but it may be said that these men did not especially hate their foe, altho they did hate the things for which he fought. They fought a clean fight, with men whose courage they respected. A German prisoner, who came into a British camp, was always sure of good treatment. Even on the field the foes showed a sportsmanship attitude hard to be repeated. During one engagement a British officer saw a German officer impaled on the barbed wire and writing in anguish. The fire was dreadful, yet he still hung there unscathed. At length the British officer could stand it no longer. He said quietly, "I can't bear to look at that poor chap any longer." So he went out under the heat of shell, released him, took him on his shoulders and carried him to the German trench. The firing ceased. Both sides watched the act with wonder. Then the commander in the German trench came forward, took from his own bosom the Iron Cross and pinned it on the breast of the British officer. Such an act was truly one of the bravest ideals of chivalry.

The letters in "Carry On" start with the beginning of the war and end just as the Americans are about to join the allies. "Living Bayonets" contains Mr. Dawson's letters from this time on.

We gather from his letters what kind of a person Dawson was. He was thoughtful, fearless, and loving. Truly these things are the fundamentals of a wonderful character.

Kaliopy Karcenes Writes Story

Another story was written last week by Kaliopy Karcenes for an English III class. The staff believes that "Only a Newsboy" will be enjoyed by the Hi Herald readers. The story follows:

ONLY A NEWSBOY

Tommy McLure was a little Irish orphan. In the orphanage where he lived, Mr. Chapman, the headmaster, made all the boys from five years of age, go out into the streets of New York City to sell newspapers.

Tommy was ten years old. Red hair and blue eyes marked his Irishness, but there was no sign of Irish fire about him as he stood on a street corner one cold December day trying to sell papers. He hoarse-
