THE GOLDEN KEYS

Which is the golden key to success? Is it "Good morning," "thank you," or "excuse me"? Maybe it's found in "excuse me," "pardon me," "please" or "good night."

We know only that by observing all of these expressions we are sure of finding the Golden Key to Suc-

If you wish to look at a bulleting board on the golden keys you will find it in Miss Baker's room, No. 223. The keys are on a bulletin board to the left of the door. Who knows, maybe even tho we are in high school it would do us good to go and look at this exhibit. —J.B.

We started a home room organiation last year. Altho it didn't prove a complete success, we felt that, with a little more co operation among us all that this year's under taking would be more successful.

As a whole we are quite courteous and we show we are quite courteous and we show pretty good co opera-tion in social activities.

When we had our election for class officers there waen't e formal thing have been going on over the legality about it. When we addressed they for the tests we are getting.

The president we merely said 'Hey, We observed Ethel Crowner and Stan." How much better it would have been five head raised our hand and said 'Mr. President."

When we have class meetings we do not seem the least bit interested in what's going on. We six and talk to a neighbor about something which doesn't concern our meeting in the least. If we do happen to drift back en the subject we don't know what was said and we have to ask the president.

Come on, Juniors. Let's make our class one to be remembered by bettering the points in which we are weak.

DOES TIME COUNT?

In the office of a large manufac-turing building, an employee gazes at the clock. It is 4 o'clock and that means quitting time for most of the employees, but not for him. He knows that for an extra hour he will be given a larger salary and will accomplish more work. He will be ahead of the other workers and will never be behind in his work.

This same thing takes place in the shooth through the salary and will never be behind in his work.

schools thruout the United States. The student who does only so much work and spends just so much time on it cannot expect an honor mark. The other student who looks ahead in his subjects and spends a reasonable amount of time on them will secondlish for work and will with accomplish far more, and will, with-out doubt, be an honor student.

Just as the employee gets more money for his extra work, the stu-dent receives a higher grade. So we can see that time does count. E.N.
