THAT TICKING MEANS WE'RE CLICKING!

Take a look at your watch. See that second hand? Every time it passes four of those little marks another American freight train is on the way.

Tick, Tick, Tick, Tickanother freight train just pulled out.

That's what the railroads are doing here in America—24 hours a day— 7 days a week. They are delivering tanks, guns, ammunition, and food in an endless stream.

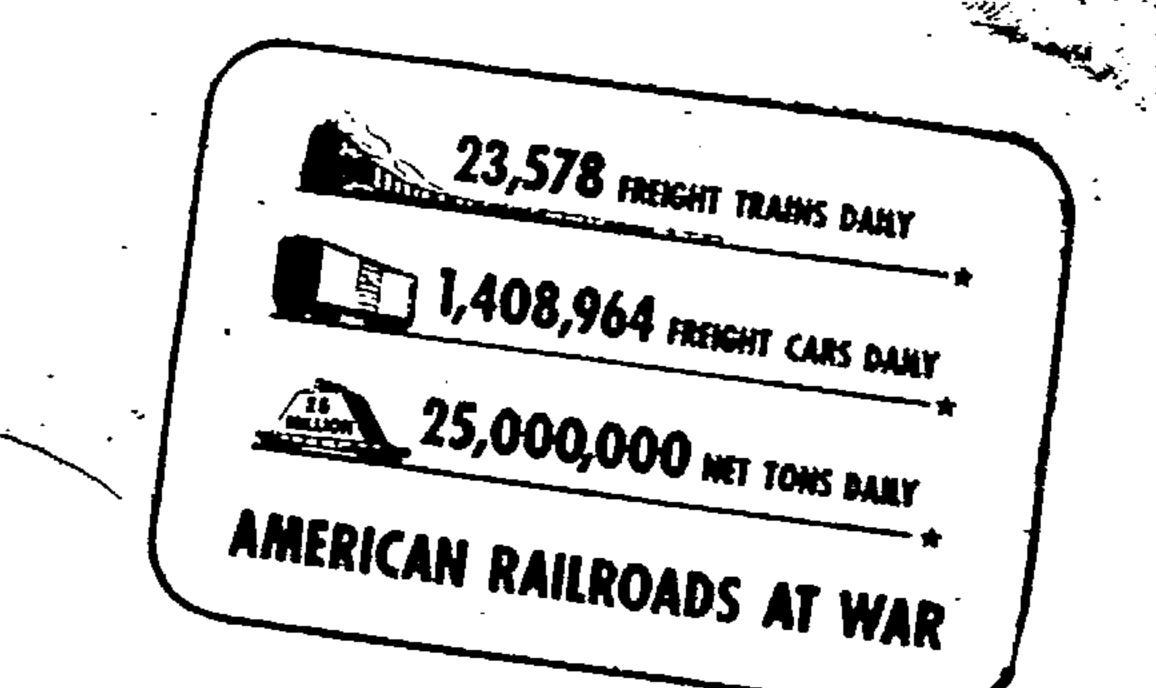

Hear that whistle? Another freight train started while you were reading.

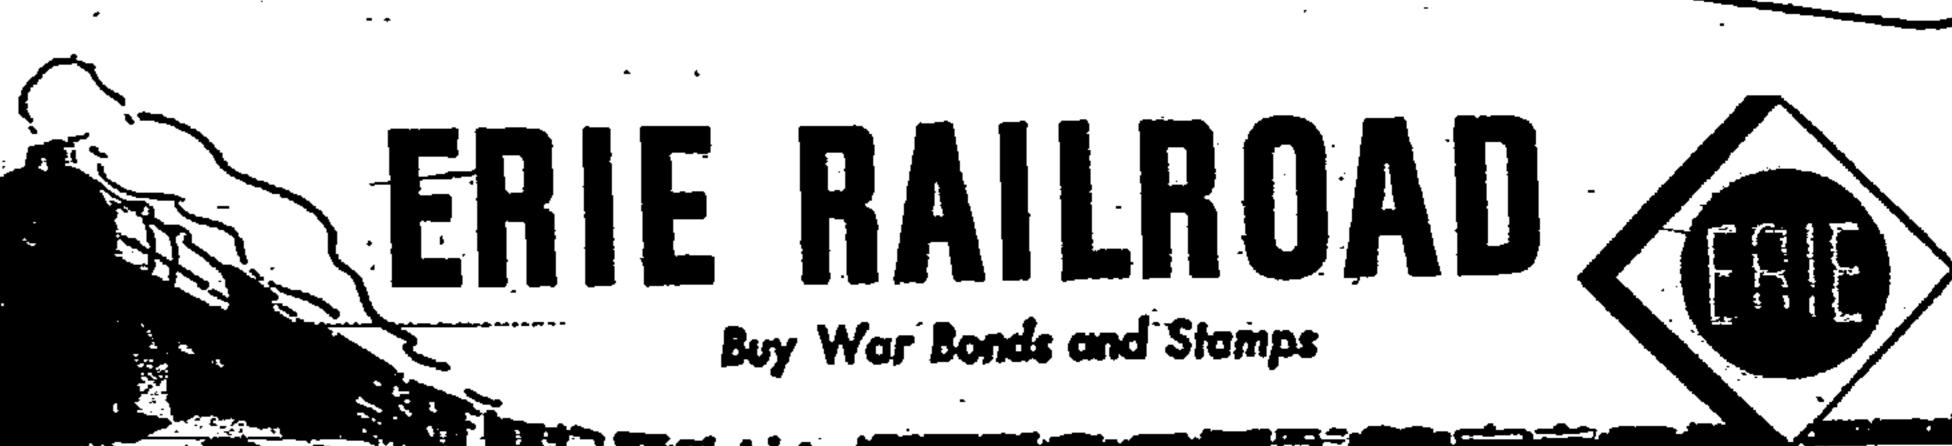

They are carrying more than 800,-000 barrels of oil daily in this record-breaking load of war and civilian goods with 20,000 fewer engines and 500,000 fewer freight cars than were used in 1917.

Tick, Tick, Tick, Tickanother freight train pulls

With this tremendous war job, essential civilian goods are also moving, because the Erie and other American railroads are mobilized for war.

Yes, that ticking on your watch means our railroads are clicking. And they will continue to deliver the goods in peace as well as in war!
