The Third War Loan

WE in rural communities do not often have the opportunity of seeing hundreds of boys marching en masse to the railroad station where they are going to take the train for an induction center. We do miss these boys from our rural communities as many of them are serving in the armed forces today.

We do not see the thousands of people pouring in and out of war plants. Nevertheless, we know that many of our fellow townsmen are journeying; several miles each day to work in these plants.

We are constantly reminded to raise all the food that we can to supply our armed forces and our war plant workers. We are trying to do this job with less help and poorer machinery than we have had in many years. However, we realize that this is our contribution to the war effort.

This is not the only way that we can help the war effort. It takes a lot of money to finance this war, and the Treasury Department is trying to finance the cost of this war as much as possible thru the sale of War Bonds.

The Third War Loan is on. In the short time between September 9 and October 2 we must raise 15 billion dollars. New York State's share is $4,-709,000,000 and Andover's is $50,000 cash or $67,-000 maturity value. This means that every one of us must buy War Bonds if the quota is to be met.

The Third War Loan Drive closes this Saturday Both Attack. and Andover's quota has not been reached—so don't put off buying that Bond any longer. The Andover National Bank or the Post Office will be glad to welcome your Bond purchase, no matter how small.

A Free Press and a Free People!

NEWSPAPERS of the nation will adopt this slogan during the fourth annual National Newspaper Week, October 1st to 8th, to express the objective of this year's observance—the creation of a greater appreciation of the part which a free press plays in the maintenance of democracy.

"The newspaper profession is more intimately and directly concerned with the affairs of our 133 million American citizens than perhaps any other one privately-owned profession," said Vernon Sanford of Oklahoma City, Okla., chairman of the National Newspaper Week committee. "The publishers, acting thru their press associations, four years ago set aside one week during the year in which they could unite for the promotion of a public relations program to better acquaint readers with their news-

"It is hoped that thru this year's observance of National Newspaper Week the newspapers may not only bring about a better understanding of the Free Press as a right of the people, but may also intensify appreciation of all our constitutionally guaranteed rights and privileges."

The New York Press Association, of which this newspaper is a member, is cooperating in this program to show the readers of New York State's weekly newspapers how free press fits into the pattern of living in a free democracy. The history of the freedom of the press in America has been made parallel to the history of America itself and the part played by weekly newspapers, such as this one you are reading, in maintaining this freedom has been great. Newspapers have continued to serve the best interests of the majority, and have upheld freedom of the individual, of speech, of religion, and of private! enterprise. This they pledge to continue toward the building of a better and freer America.
