I was asked by the Lecturer to give Tribute to the Boys on the Farm Front. I am very glad of an opportunity to pay tribute to these boys, for I truly think one of the important industries, but surely our boys in the Armed Forces and other industries could not have carried on to success if older men who stood behind these lads with all the push they

These boys has taken a part that show no scars, Purple Heart or Medals of any kind and many of them have had to take taunts Baker's Hardware News of "Yellow,"; "Hide out on the farm," but regardless they have done their part well without pay for overtime and often not! an even break financially. I think the war might have been lost without these — our farm boys.

acknowledge there are some

slackers as there were some in the armed forces. There was all Judas among Jesus Chosen Twelve, but don't let us measure the boys in the Farm Front by the few any more than Jesus measured the Twelve by Judas. Many of the farm boys would rather have gone with their pals into Service but were considered of more value producing food—and how they did do the Job, and against so many odds-16 to 18 hours a day for lack of help and machinery and through unfavorable growing conditions —they did produce the food | without which it has authentically been stated the War would have been lost by the Allies.

One of our Andover boys in the Armed Services sums up the real Tribute to the Farm Front Boys in a letter to the folks at home I quote:

"We won this war mostly by the civilians back home on the production lines; if it hadn't been for them we could easily have lost and suffered lots more complications. Not one of the men I have talked with over here have complained about equipment and supplies and if some of the civilians back home could see some of their handiwork that is over here they would bust a few buttons off their vests. They certainly deserve a lot of credit. troops were licked if they could 'equipment.'
