Now Station ACS brings you your weekly jokes. Better lean closer. You won't want to miss Here we go:

1-A pianist of fame was giving a recital at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The demand, for seats was so tremendous that chairs were placed on the stage. The pianist was standing in the wings waiting to make his appearance when two elderly ladies holding tickets for stage seats approached him. "Can you tell us which seats are ours?" He glared at the women. "Mesdames, you] may take any seat you want as long as you leave the stool to
