HEALTH FOR

This column is sponsored, in the interest of better health, by the Allegany Health & Tuberculosis Association, 44 Schuyler St., Belmont, N. Y.

Not long ago parents and docmunicable "children diseases" endangered the child's and often cost him his life. Among these death-dealing diseases were whooping cough, smallpox, diptheria, and measles.

Mr. Pingrey and the Belmont Better child care and the development of curative drugs have decreased child deaths from these But an ounce of prevention is still worth a pound of been the use of immunizing techniques to protect children against many communicable ills.

For the first six-months of his life, a baby retains in the blood he derived from his mother certain infection-resisting substances. After this "natural immunity" period, protection against some diseases can be extended artificcourse, is the best source of advice on when and what immunization should be given the indi-

When a child has been exposed to measles, and the date of exposure is known, it is also possible to immunize the child, for a limited time, by an injecfrom human blood which contains antibodies against measles. Inoculations can also be given against tetanus (lockjaw), a deadly disease caused by a germ that multiplies most rapidly in a deep wound, Tetanus immunization is recommended for all children—around the age of three months—since the disease may develop even from a minor wound which may be contaminated. In emergencies, temporary protection can be obtained with antitetanus serum. Within the last decade, there has been developed a technique immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough, and tetanus at munization should begin at from two to three months of age and "booster shots" to reinforce procan be given when recommended and when necessary later in the child's life.
