Stock Should Be Watched for Disease

Though there is no immediate danger of an outbreak of foot and mouth disease among livestock of Allegany County, nevertheless farmers are asked, for their own protection, to be on the alert for any possibility.

County agent, H. Ira Blixt suggests that farmers inspect cattle or hogs for indications of sore mouths or feet. If detected, this should be reported to the local or state field veterinarian or to Dr. Ivan G. Howe, Bureau of Animal Industry in Albany. L. R. Simons, State director of county agricultural agents point-ed out that the Federal Government has acted quickly to confine the danger to the area of the outbreak in Canada, and State officials likewise have alerted field veterinarians as a precautionary move in New York State. Though New York is a long way from the outbreak and no
