America's Great Hope

By Mary Brown

In spite of being branded as a generation "gone to the dogs," the youth of the high school age today is America's greatest hope. boast of ancestry that came to this land because of stern principles and developed this land with their faith would fear for this land except for one asset--- adults, because in reality only a very very few older people are quick to grasp the mistakes of the younger generation.

With the exception of this minority they look at us with hope and many of them with a prayer. Do we live up to this responsibility of carring Amergame and 15-6 in the night cap. ica and democracy to a successful future?

the thirty-year record of war var's strong drive team by the and unrest in the world. This score of 21-17 and 22-20. may be done and our responsibility may be fulfilled only if we begin today. How can we begin? Beginning can only mean a res-olution to practice certain basic principles which will tend to develop a foundation for future good citzenship.

We must never tamper with the truth. It must be told. Profiting by the errors of others is always a sound principal. we observe what has happened to unguided lives, we will seek guidance on right and wrong.

We must also recognize that laws were made by us—to be obeyed by us. This is one of the most important of all these principles, because laws cannot ' enforced in a democracy if the majority of the people do not realize this fact. Laws are made nation' people and any offenses laws are also against the people. Our's is the heritage of the world's greatest nation and we must be ready to conquer the problems of this inheritance. We are America's great hope, so we should begin today to fulfill
