AG SOCIETY gathering at Albany last week provided a fine program of agricultural discussion of affairs and a pleasant social affair climaxed by the traditional awards to three Century Farm Families and a splendid address by Gen. Wedemeyer of China duty fame, but some of the old fire and enthusiasm was lacking. It may have been overshadowed by the inauguration at Washington and probably the flu bug took its toll.

The Wilson-Jones farm at Hali; James Cowan farm at Hobart and the Lewis Cheney farm at Kiantone were the three farms honor-of C. W. Williams his interest in the grocery firm. The firm of H. H. Williams has been in business in Andover for ten years and will be continued by the senior member.

Beneway, was re-elected president of the society and Webster J. Birdsall, Albany, treasurer.

CROP Program in New York state, due to bring its 1952 campaign to a close on January 15th, in an executive committee meeting on that date decided to extend activities to February 23rd, in order to get in all pledges and donations, according to Rev. R. Williamson, director. $16,000 in cash and commodities was reported, with more coming in. Sample quotas reached include a 1,000 bushels of wheat from Genesee county; a $2,500 carload from Chautauqua county, both of whom will ship to needy countries after the first of the coming month. A carload of spit beans is being cleaned at Batavia for shipment, and the Canners Association has 417 cases of goods pledged, more to in the final delivery. CROP for 1953 will continue with renewed enthusiasm for this good work, and will receive the full attention of Grange Service & Hospitality committees all over the state, according to Clarencce Johnson, vice-chairman of the program and Steward of N.Y. State Grange.

NATIONAL GRANGE Legislative Policy, so clearly stated in a recent release booklet from the Washington office entitiled "On This We Stand", deserve most careful consideration of everyone interested in the future of American agriculture. J. T. Sanders, national legislative council hails it as the best statement of truly grass-roots programs and policies expressed in years.

Albany—Use of our old license plate on the front of your car, after you attach the 1953 single plate to the rear of the vehicle, is illegal, in the opinion of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, Motor Vehicle Commissioner James R. Macduff says.

The 1952 plates expire at midnight, Monday, February 2.

The opinion on use of the old plate, prepared by Mortimer M. Kassell, counsel to the motor Vehicle Commissioner, pointed out that a 1951 amendment to the Vehicle and Traffic Law provided that one number plate would be issued for 1953 "which shall be displayed on the rear of the Vehicle and none shall be displayed on the front."

"It is entirely clear from the foregoing," said Mr. Kassell in his ruling, "that the use of a number plate for a previous year, when the 1953 plate is displayed on the rear is illegal."

Prior to the 1951 amendment, the law said that when only one plate was issued "none need be displayed on the front."

"The difference between the two provisions (substitution of the word 'shall' for the word 'need') shows clearly that the Legislature intended to eliminate any possibility that for the 1953 registration year the number plate for a former year could be displayed on the front of the vehicle," the opinion concluded.

Notice To Owners And Harborers of Dogs

Dog licenses for 1952 expired on December 31st, 1952. The 1953 license fee was due January 1st. Licenses so issued will cover the period from January 1st to December 31, 1953. Every dog must wear a tag of the current dog license year. A dog without such a tag is not protected by law and no action can be maintained for his injury or destruction.

An unlicensed dog may be seized and killed and the fact that a dog is without a tag is presumptive evidence that the dog is unlicensed.

Dog licenses must be obtained from the clerk of the city or town where the dog is harbored or kept.

License fees: Male dog, $2.25; female dog, $5.25; spayed female dog, $2.25.

No license can be issued for less than the full license year.

The owner of a dog who fails or refuses to obtain a license for the dog as required by law incurs a penalty of $10.00 and costs.

The enumerators of towns and the police department of cities are required to prepare in January of each year a list of dog owners. The omission of the name of an owner from such lists will not excuse the owner from obtaining a license.

If you owned a dog last year and do not own one now, so advise the clerk of your town or city.

Dog licenses in the Town of Andover may be obtained from Mrs. Marion Theetge, Town Clerk, at the Folsing Store. 5

Buffalo News Almanac And Fact Book Available

Western New York's own reference book, The Buffalo Evenings News Almanac and Fact Book for 1953, is now available. It contains thousands of facts that can be found in no other single volume and is edited to fit the needs of residents of this area who want the names and addresses of local as well as state and federal government officials.

Top members of President Eisenhower's administration will be found listed in the 1953 News Almanac and, of just as much importance to Western New Yorkers, up-to-date lists of area city, village, town and county government officials are given. Final U. S. Census information covering townships, cities, incorporated villages and unincorporated villages with more than 1000 inhabitants, also is included in the 1953 News Almanac.

Old-time Almanac features—monthly calendars which list the time of sunrise and sunset, moon rise and set times, historic dates for each day of the year, gifts for wedding anniversaries, superstitions connected with weddings—are included. A chronology for 1952 which includes a review of international, national and local happenings, as well as a complete review of sports events, also will be found in the 1953 News Almanac, making a reference book that everyone should have.

HEALTH FOR ALL

This column is sponsored, in the interest of better health, by the Allegany Health & Tuberculosis Association, 44 Schuyler St., Belmont, N. Y.

Pneumonia

A severe cold with a fever is always dangerous. If it is accompanied by shaking chills, pain in the chest or side, difficulty in breathing, or blood-tinged sputum, it is probably pneumonia. Call the doctor at once.

Any delay in calling the doctor is an unnecessary risk. It delays his diagnosis, postpones his beginning proper treatment, may even cost the patient his life. In this day of effective serums and drugs, most of those who die of pneumonia are people who neglected a heavy cold that hung on.

Pneumonia is an acute inflamation of the lungs, which interferes with the lung's normal function of supplying oxygen to the blood stream. There are various types of pneumonia, caused by different pneumonia germs, the most common of which are the pneumococci. It is spread from person to person, by those with the disease or by apparently healthy persons carrying the germs in mouth or throat.

Because pneumonia is communicable, the first step, after calling the doctor, is to get the patient into a bed in a room by himself. Next, while waiting for the doctor, get, in a clean bottle or jar, a specium of sputum coughed up from the chest. The doctor may want this specium for examination immediately. If hospitilization is not required, ask your doctor to help you get the best nursing service available. Guard against the spread of the germs by taking all possible sanitary precautions.

Antipneumococcus serums and drugs like penicillin, aureomycin, and the "Sulfa Drugs" are effectively used in treating pneumonia. Used promptly, they have saved many lives. Doctors warn, however, that pneumonia developes rapidly and that these scientific advances can have their maxium effect only when the doctor is given a chance to use them early in the course of the disease.

There is not yet an accepted vaccine for the prevention of pneumonia. The best protection lies in individual good health with its natural resistance to infection.

All About Fish

Time was when fish was available only to those people who lived near the ocean or a fresh water stream or lake. Nowadays, thanks to modern methods, fish is available everywhere, all year round.

Fish and sea foods are good—and good for you. They're an excellent source of protein, and contain valuable minerals and vitamins as well. If the fish made its home in the sea, it will give you the iodine you need for a healthy thyroid. You'll find too, that fish adds a touch of variety to your menus.

During the winter months, you will see a lot of canned and frozen fish in the stores. Salmon and tuna are the most popular canned fish.

If frozen fish is your choice, remember to thaw it slowly on the shelf of your refrigerator. Home economists at Cornell advise against soaking the fish in water since flavorful juices may be destroyed. If you're in a hurry and don't want to wait for the fish to thaw slowly, you can cook it solidly frozen if you use a low temperature and allow extra time for cooking.

A Simple Test

If you're confused about soaps and synthetic detergents, and are not sure which type of laundry product you have, here's a simple way to tell. Take a small jar or tumbler, fill it half-full of warm water, and add about a teaspoon of vinegar. Then add a small amount of the laundry products. Shake well. If suds form, your product is a "syndet." If no suds form, it's a soap.

Better Light, Better Sight

These long winter evenings are ideal for curling up on the sofa with a good magazine or book. You'll enjoy your book a lot more though if you read in a good light.

Choose a reading lamp with care. Avoid skimpy lampshades. Wider shades are better; the larger the bottom diameter of a shade, the more light it gives you. A shade for a reading lamp should have at least a 16-inch diameter.

Short, squatty lamps can interfere with your reading light. If your lamp sits on a table, the lower edge of the shade should be between 15 and 17 inches above the tabletop. If it's a floor lamp, the bottom of the shade should be about 39 to 43 inches from the floor.

Sheet Buying Hints

With nearly every dry goods store in the country sponsoring white sales these days, it might be well to review the things to remember when buying sheets and pillowcases, say home economics specialists at Cornell.

There are four types of sheets on market from which you may make a wise choice. Nos. 182, 140, 180, and 200. The number refers to the thread count. For instance, in a 140 sheet, there are approximately 74 lengthwise yarns and 66 crosswise yarns in one square inch of fabric; total, 140.

Types 128 and 140 are know as muslin sheets and are less fine than are the percale sheets, types 180 and 200. Type 128 is a good buy on a low budget but it won't stand up for long under the stress and strain of commercial laundries. Type 140 is the heaviest and most durable of the lot.

Yarns in the percales are of the finer cotton than yarn in muslin sheets and have undergone a process called combing to make them soft and smooth.

Types 140 and 180 are about the same price. Hence your choice is between durability and fine quality with less durability. You'll pay more for the extra luxury of type 200.

In Case of Power Failure

If you have a home freezer full of food, you may be worried about what may happen to it if the power should fail during winter storms and winds. Home economists at Cornell say you can set your mind at rest on this score, since the average home freezer that is full of food, or nearly so, will maintain below-freezing temperature for about 48 hours after power cut-off. Of course, you shouldn't open the freezer any more than is absolutely necessary.

If the electricity isn't back on in 48 hours, you can use dry ice to keep your food from thawing. Any local ice cream company will be glad to tell you where you can obtain dry ice. It's a good idea to find out the location of the nearest supply ahead of time, so you can avoid any delay in case of emergency. Remember never to touch dry ice with your bare hands, though. Always wear heavy gloves.
