

PLANNING A VACATION TRIP? An Editorial

Are you planning a vacation trip? If so, and you wish to eliminate almost all of the dangers within your control, here are some suggestions from professional sources: Have your car safety-checked before you leave. Don't risk a breakdown on the highway. Have a competent mechanic check your brakes, steering, lights, tires, windshield wipers, and exhaust system.

If you don't have seat belts, have them installed and learn to use them. Seat belts spell the difference between safety and suffering.

Plan your trip — and rests — in advance. Knowing your route will make driving easier, and reduce your chances of getting lost or confused in traffic.

Plan to travel when traffic is lightest; during week-days, and between peak morning and evening hours.

When driving in unfamiliar areas, follow these basic safety rules: take it easy so that you have time enough to spot trouble ahead; stay alert at all times; heed all warning signs such as CURVE, HILL, or NARROW BRIDGE; and be especially alert for pedestrians when passing resort areas.

Watch out for fatigue; never drive more than 2 hours without a rest.

Take along a flashlight, basic tools for minor repairs, and a First Aid Kit.

Keep your children and pets out of the front seat as they become bored and restless on long trips. Many accidents have occurred when romping children or pets distracted the driver. Young children and pets should always stay in the back seat, where sudden, impulsive actions will not create a hazardous driving situation.

The best way to keep children under control, is to provide them with seat belts. Seat belts not only keep the children quiet, but also protect them from harm in the event of an accident.

Of course, pets cannot usually be seat belted. However, they should be trained to stay in the back seat. If they cannot be controlled, they should be kept in pet carriers or leashed in the back seat. This may hurt your pet's feelings, a little, but it is better than letting the pet's activities cause a crash that can physically hurt the pet — and your entire family.

Keep the doors locked while the car is in motion. Keep rear windows rolled up high enough to prevent your children from sticking out their hands or heads. If you have electrically controlled windows, don't let the children play with them — they might catch their hands or necks.

Don't give your children lollipops, or other stick confections that can cause injury. Prohibit sharp and heavy toys.

Provide car games to keep the children amused — there are several books of children's car games on the market, or even invent your own — such as keeping track of how many different makes of cars you meet, etc.

Make regular stops at rest areas where the children can run-off some of their energy. However, if you stop near the highway do not permit ballplaying — the ball may roll onto the highway.

Last — but not least — Know and obey the basic rules and regulations for safe driving. Watch out for the speed limits that are posted — both on the open highway — and through small hamlets, villages and zoned areas. After all, nothing can put the damper on happy spirits while vacationing any quicker than being stopped by a Traffic Officer or State Trooper and being given a traffic summons. There is not only the time involved, but also the mark on your driving license and the cost of the fine which might put a crimp on the budget of your vacation expenses.

Take all of these things into consideration — and enjoy a Happy Vacation!

Dear Mr. "Red",
 Well here we are back at our cottage at Lake Edmon. We arrived here on June 3rd and in fairly warm weather, but it soon disappeared and now with this cold and rain, we are about ready to return South.

I guess I wrote the last time from Cape Hatteras, N. C.

We camped there for four days, the first two were good, then it became rainy and cold.

We were on the outer banks and the wind sure blew.

On leaving there we visited Kitty Hawk, where the Wright Bros., made their first flight. Came on into Virginia to Wakefield and ferried across the James River to Jamestown and Williamsburg. A very interesting place.

On coming West from there towards Richmond, we came by a large pottery sales, which included several buildings. I made the mistake of stopping at my wife's request. Thought I would never get her out of the place. She finally spent her (egg) money and we traveled on North.

Arriving at Gettysburg, Pa., we turned East to York, Lancaster and East through the Amish country. They are sure good farmers and keep their places neat and attractive.

Next morning we went on a tour through the Hershey Plant at Hershey, then on home.

On criss-crossing all the states from Florida to here we traveled over 2300 miles in the 16 days.

Yours for this time
 Arthur Burdick
