Nephew Adds Another Trophy To His Collection

The following article is an interesting hunting trip made by Mr. Papst, nephew of Clyde Yorton:

Successful hunting trips are becoming a yearly event for James Papst of Saginaw. In his first two hunting expeditions, Papst collected nine big game trophies, including one of the largest Stone sheep.

Papst, who lives at 1820 S. Michigan, returned after an August trip to British Columbia with a Stone sheep that "is among the top 25 in the world ratings".

The sheep, which weighed more than 500 pounds with 47-inch-long horns, was one of five major trophies collected by Papst in his 21-day hunting trip.

Papst also shot a seven-foot 600-pound grizzly bear, a caribou and two "average-sized" Rocky Mountain goats. Last year, in his first hunting expedition, Papst shot a Big Horn sheep, another grizzly bear, a mountain goat and a moose.

His most prized trophy, the Stone sheep, was killed on Aug. 7 in the mountains. Papst brought the animal down with a 300 Winchester Magnum from about 300 yards.

Papst is having the animal sent to New York for official measurement. He said he is sure the sheep will rate as one of the largest ever shot. Its size is determined by the Boone and Crockett ratings, a point system which takes into consideration most of the animal's vital measurements. It is considered the most authoritative of all size-determining systems.

Papst said he and his British Columbian guide, William A. Beattie, were hunting mountain goats when they spotted the bear which was dozing less than 25 feet away.

"I jumped off a ledge and there it was," explained Papst, "so I didn't have much trouble shooting it."

A few hours later the pair saw the caribou and Papst was on his way to an even more successful trip than his first time out.

He concluded the expedition by shooting the two mountain goats which both had 9-inch horns. For good measure, Papst killed a coyote near the end of the trip.

Papst who didn't think he would be able to go hunting this year because it took him two years to save for the first trip, said he definitely is going next year and said he wants to hunt in either Mexico or Alaska.

That could be a warning to all jaguars and polar bears.
