Trouble With Your Maple Tree Leaves?

Did the surface of the leaves of your maple trees develop growths or swellings last year? If they did, chances are they will again this year.

These swellings are caused by microscopic gall mites.

The State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University cautions that, though the injury is usually of a temporary nature, periodically gall mites become extremely abundant, and the aesthetic value of ornamental maples is seriously affected.

A free copy of a six-page, illustrated leaflet, newly revised and expanded, describes the mites, the damage they can do to maple trees, and latest methods of control. Mail a postal card to:

Extension Department, State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.
Y. 13210.

The leaflet is one of a series of colorfully illustrated publications on tree pests, insects, fungi and plant diseases. Each of the leaflets, published by the College of Forestry, is available free of charge, as a public service to homeowners.
