Empire Farm Days August 9 and 10

Farmer Lucien Hills will host the biggest crowd to descend on any New York farm this year.

His place near Wayland, New York is expected to draw more than 40,000 for this year's Empire Farm Days August 9 and 10 (formerly called the Potato Field Day and Materials Handling Exhibition).

All farmers are invited to see the huge array of equipment, field demonstrations and informative farm exhibits that will dot Hill's 1500 acre potato and grain farm.

Exhibitors will include most major equipment manufacturers, short line machinery companies and farm equipment distributors showing a range of items from planting to harvesting tools, from materials handling to milking equipment, and from farm chemicals to feed storage units.

Other special features will include building ideas, a Water-Up parade of pumps, New York State College of Agriculture's farm and home exhibit and a special Electricity Powers Exhibit sponsored by the major power companies.

Farmers will have an opportunity to compare machinery, equipment and supplies, to see new models on display and in action, to gain scores of new ideas in farm management, and to visit with key company personnel.

The free-admission, all business show will include eating facilities set up by local organizations in the Wayland area.

The Lucien Hills farm is located in Steuben and Livingston Counties on the north edge of Wayland. There will be plenty of directional signs in the area, guiding visitors to the site.

There will be ribbons for winners in each class and special trophies will be awarded for Grand champion female, three best females bred for exhibitor, produce of dam and winner of the best

New Restaurant Opens In Alfred

"The Little Red Hen", Alfred's newest restaurant opened Friday, July 28th. "The Little Red Hen" is located on the Alfred-Alfred Station Road, Route 244 and the proprietors are Mr. and Mrs. Judson Stearns, who have been in the poultry business since 1937.

The new restaurant is on the site adjacent to the Stearns' processing plant and wholesale store. The restaurant, an all-metal building with a glass front seats 80 persons. Carry-out service is available. The menu includes chicken, turkey, fish, shrimp, scallops and clams as well as a variety of sandwiches.

Five-minute service is planned for those eating in the restaurant. As a customer enters the front upper class. There will also be special awards for Junior Members.

Show time is 12:30—The barns at the Fairgrounds will be open the day before the show—Hay and Straw will be available. A refreshment stand will be in operation—Anyone in the two County area is welcome to participate. There will be a tent available for showing and spectators are welcome.

door his order is taken at a window and five minutes later his dinner is served to him at his table. The window just outside the front door provides for carry-out service, which can be for a single portion or portions for parties of any size.

"The Little Red Hen" is a dream come true of Mr. Stearns and his father, Victor, who opened their retail store in Hornell in 1951.

The Stearns' have four children, Mrs. David (Janice) Porter of Alfred Station; Linda, a sophomore at Ithaca College; Patricia and Judson, Jr., both at home and students at the Alfred Almond Central School.

The building was erected by Ford and Peckham of Andover. Construction started on the building last April and Thursday night the Stearns' and the Andover firm were hosts at a pre-opening dinner. Approximately 70 guests toured the kitchen facilities, following the dinner.

Mr. Stearns is starting future plans for a picnic area.
