Omitting Stripping Has Little Effect on Production

The elimination of machine stripping of dairy cattle has little effect on milk production or percentage of fat. Neither does it cause mastitis, a Cornell University animal scientist has reported. However, the per cent of residual milk (that left in the udder even when stripping is carried out) was significantly higher, said

Triple A Saddle Club

The Triple A Saddle Club met at our leader's home, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Herrick, on October 10. This was the first meeting of the year and members signed up for projects. New officers were elected.

Robert Ormsby was reelected president. This is his tenth year in 4-H and he is a student at Alfred State College. John Herrick fourth year in 4-H, was elected vice president. Robert Lewis sixth year, will be secretary. Treasurer will be Robert Meacham two years; Sue Stephen, two years, was elected. Recreation leader, and Lynn Herrick, five years, was elected News Reporter.

On October 8, five members of our club attended the 4-H Achievement Day at Belmont.

Plans were made for a hike on October 12 for those members who will do the "Know Your Trees" project.

Donald Lang was welcomed as a new member. The next meeting will be November 14 at 7:30 at our leader's home. Robert Lewis will present a program on Fire Prevention. New members are welcome.

The Triple A Saddle Club is made up of interested students from Alfred-Almond and Andover Central Schools.

Keith R. Goff, graduate assistant at the N.Y. State College of Agriculture, Cornell.

Though no significant differences were found in daily milk production for all cows, differences were noted among individual animals, Goff said. He found a greater reduction in milk due to non-stripping in low producing cows than in high producers.

Goff reported no differences were found in leukocyte counts or California mastitis test (CMT) scores. "These results tend to show that the importance of machine stripping has been overemphasized," he said.
