

GREENWOOD NEWS

Grace Young, Reporter

A Thanksgiving Service in charge of Rev. Gerald Wolter, will be held at the Methodist Church Wednesday evening, November 22 at 8 o'clock. The Community is invited to come and share in this Worship Service. Members of the Andover Methodist Church are invited to join with us. Mrs. Wolter and family attended the Sunday Service.

Open House at Greenwood Central School Friday night was very well attended. Teachers were in their homerooms and parents waited to consult with them about the progress of their children. Some of the remodeling was inspected including the new Science Room with tiered floor, the new Business Room with carpeted floor and Work Room for publishing the Fulcrum, etc., also repair and storage room of the Library. Music director, Howard Kilbury, Jr., presented a variety musical program in the auditorium of the 42 voice Mixed Chorus and the 55 piece Band, that showed a good potential.

The Volunteer Firemen were called out twice last week. Wednesday about 6 p. m., a Mutual Aid call sent the men up the Christian Hollow Road to the former Emily Farney farm where the large barn was consumed. A New Jersey family bought the farm and moved in August. Some pigs, small machinery and seed were lost. About 60 men from West Union, Whitesville, Andover and Greenwood answered the alarm. Horses, a cow and some machinery were saved with a second barn and nearby tenant house. Friday afternoon the firemen were called by Mrs. Franklyn Krasen for a grass fire started when she was burning papers.

Roger Harkenrider, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Harkenrider of Rexville and an Alumni of G.C.S., is in rehearsal in Baltimore with a professional resident repertory company for a feature role in Shakespeare's "Hamlet". He will also appear in five other Century State productions in repertory with Hamlet from now through June. He has a BS degree from Ithaca College and MS degree from Boston University. He has appeared on Broadway and performed this summer at Provincetown, Mass.

The Community extends sympathy to the family of Herman Koehler, who died Friday evening after falling head first 20 feet from the hay mow in his barn. The family has lived on the West Greenwood farm since moving from New Jersey twelve years ago. Mr. Koehler and his wife have managed a restaurant in Andover for several years. Besides his wife, Marie Mills Koehler, he is survived by a son, Kenneth and three daughters, June and Elsie, all graduates of G. C. S., and Kathy, a Junior this year, also his mother of West Greenwood and three grandchildren. The funeral services were Monday at the Mulholland Funeral Home with burial in Andover.

Mrs. Rose Tobias Cooper, 82, of Breezport, died Saturday, November 11, 1967. She was a native of Greenwood and had lived in Hornell and Elmira. She was survived by a granddaughter Mrs. Donald Garrison of Millerton R.I., a grandson, S-Sgt. Malcolm E. Padden of Allegheny, N. Y., and three great grandchildren. The funeral was from the Olthof Funeral Home at Elmira, with burial in Greenwood Cemetery.

FORMAL OPENING

Thursday, Nov. 16

A. McHenry & Co., Inc.

We have made it easier for you to shop in town. When you start out for McHenry you can be certain of a parking space in the very own parking lot with an entrance from Main Street. From the rear parking lot you step into the store through the new colored entry. The interior of McHenry is enlarged and more attractive and we believe you will enjoy the new atmosphere combined with our personal attention which you always expect at McHenry's.

We have added a new section to our store and added facilities for you to view and see them. The new section features as a new North lighted diamond grading room as well as our new diamond show room for your comfort and privacy for selecting diamonds or jewelry. Our spacious new interior was especially designed to graciously show our sterling silver, fine china and hand blown and cut glass ware.

We are proud that our jewelry store has endured since 1840 and we have blended the best of the old furnishings with our new ones to make an even more attractive store and we're anxious to have you see it.
