

Buffalo Evening News Almanac Now Available

Carrying full lists of government officials and a wealth of other useful information — including changes as recent as Jan. 20 — The Buffalo Evening News Almanac and Fact Book for 1968, now is on sale. Like other annual editions since 1933, this year's has been edited to fit the needs of Western New York residents and contains information found in no other single volume.

The person who has need to contact various government officials will find The News Almanac and Fact Book for 1968 invaluable for it contains the names of village, town, city, county, state and federal officials serving the eight Western New York counties as well as state officials in Albany and federal officials in Washington. School officials in all eight counties also are listed.

The extremely accurate weather prophecy of Dr. Wolfgang K. Blitzenregen for the current year has been included, as have recipes for taste-tempting desserts and cookies, home safety suggestions and even hints of how to choose a wig. Sports fans will find local, national and international champions in all branches of sports listed. And if you'd like to try fortune telling using numerology, there's an article on that subject.

At this temperature metal becomes as brittle as candy canes and eyeballs pop. But if you like it brisk like this, forget Lower Slobbovia and head for Vostok, Antarctica, which holds all records for low temperatures.

And head my way if you're interested in a policy that protects you and your family from the kind of medical expense that can wipe out your savings. I'd like to tell you about Farmers and Traders Life's plan called Major Medical Insurance. Insure yourself against financial disaster. A call to me and I'll give you full details about this policy that every family man should have.
