UFO's - Are They Real?

The nature of unidentified flying objects has long been pondered by men. But just recently - that is, in the last twenty years - there seems to be much more appearance of them. That is to say, there has been a rash of more reported sightings than ever before. This may mean that there have been more to report recently - or it may mean more people have decided to report their sightings - or very probably, there have been more reports than sightings.

I personally have never seen a UFO, but from some of the fantastic sights that I have read or heard about, I cannot help but believe that there is something more than swamp gas flying around. There have been many explanations including swamp gas, reflections, weather balloons, meteors, and temperature inversions.

There are, however, many unexplained sightings. For example the blimp-shaped object that completely encircled a commercial airplane can hardly be blamed to reflection when all of the passengers and crew saw exactly the same thing. The speed of many of the reported objects leads one to believe that the projects are not government - oriented.

Until I see an unidentified flying object, I too, can stay with the non-believers. This is the easy path. But it is fast approaching the point that we must face the fact that there is something there and we will no longer be able to tell ourselves that those people who have seen these objects are just cranks wanting their name in the paper.

Problem Corner

Dear Eenie & Meanie,

I am jealous of a certain person in school. I always have a terrible inferiority complex when this person is around. She seems to have everything: popularity, nice clothes and good marks. How can I overcome my jealousy? Feels Inferior"

Dear "Feels"

We feel that you should stop thinking that this person is better than you are. We are all equal and we all have our good points and weaknesses.

Try to build up your good points into talents and build your weaknesses up into good points. Above all, however, do not let this person of whom you are jealous. Develop your own personality. We're sure that you will find yourself just as "good" as she is.
